SUGAR-PLUM LAND

KING GINGERBREAD OWNED A KNICK-KNACK DOG, AND THE CUT-OUT LADY OWNED A COCOANUT CAT.

The next adventure that Nancy and Nick had was in Sugar-Plum Land.

The Fairy Queen sent them there because King Gingerbread owned a knick-knack dog, and the Cut-Out Lady, who did his mending, owned a cocoanut cat, and the two of them fought so that the knick-knack fur and the cocoanut fur flew all over the place and got into the eyes and ears and mouths of the Sugar-Plum Landers.

"Sugar-Plum Land has always been a peaceful place," declared the Fairy Queen indignantly, "and there isn't a particle of sense in allowing two silly animals to carry on so."

Besides, as trouble always does it not only upset the two trouble makers but also their owners.

The Cut-Out Lady who owned the cocoanut cat was so upset when her pet came limping home with most of the cocoanut barked off him, that she almost cried her one eye out. Then of course, having no other eye to see with, she couldn't sew the king's buttons on straight and they would miss the buttonholes by an inch or more.

And when the king got up in the morning and went to put on clean clothes out of his candy-box bureau drawer, his lace frilled shirts (made out of candy-box trimmings) and his red tarlatan coat (made out of a Christmas tree stocking), both buttoned on as crooked as a pig's tail and made him look shocking.

As a result his temper was quite testy. And he made laws that nobody could obey, and things got into an awful fix.

"See what you can do, kiddies," said the Fairy Queen kindly. "Your magic shoes will take you there in a twinkling. Sugar-Plum Land lies north of Soda-Water Ocean, south of Custard-Sauce Sea, and directly between Castor Land and Plaster Land."

"We'll find it!" said Nancy happily. "And we'll try as hard as we can to put things to rights."

Quo Warranto Proceedings Instituted Against House of David Colony

To Compel Officials to Show Cause Why Organization Should Not Be Disbanded

LANSING, Mich., April 3.—(By the Associated Press)—Quo warranto proceedings to compel officials of the House of David colony to show cause why the organization should not be disbanded, were instituted in Ingham county circuit court here today by the state of Michigan.

DEATH WAS DUE TO BLOOD POISONING

According to an inquest, held some time ago by Judge Frederic A. Fisher, the result of which was made known today, the death on March 12 of Theodore Brown was caused by blood poisoning. The finding reads as follows: "On March 3, 1923, at or about 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon, a Mack truck belonging to Fred H. Rourke was being driven in a westerly direction along Pine street. The truck contained about five tons of coal, and the street was covered to a considerable depth with snow and ice, causing the truck to sway from side to side as it passed over the rough and irregular surface of the street and along the deep ruts in the snow.

"Standing at the rear of the truck and with one foot inside the body of the truck and the other resting on the running board, were two helpers, so-called, in the employment of said Fred H. Rourke, whose duty it was to assist the driver in unloading the coal. After backing out of a snowdrift, the truck was started forward at a slow rate of speed when two small boys, whose identities are unknown, threw snowballs at the men standing in the rear of the truck. Both ducked their heads and one of them, Theodore Brown, a married man, 23 years of age, residing at 66 Nichols street, slipped and fell to the ground. It is probable, but as I find by no means certain, that Mr. Brown would have retained his position on the moving truck but for his effort to avoid the snowballs. The truck ran over his lower leg causing a compound fracture of both bones. Blood poisoning ensued and he died at St. John's hospital on March 12.

"I find that death was due to blood poisoning and not occasioned by criminal negligence or unlawful act of any person or persons, natural or corporate."

STIRRING ADDRESS AT AUDITORIUM BY SECRETARY DAVIS OF THE LABOR DEPARTMENT

Appeals For Amendment to Protect Child Labor, for Something More Than a Living Wage for Toilers and Selective Immigration—Speaker Says Lowell Auditorium is Finest Hall of Its Kind in the United States

Quite a large audience of men and women representative of many walks of life in Lowell including the best of her citizenry, rank and file, was aroused to a high pitch of patriotic enthusiasm and sympathetic emotion in Memorial Auditorium early last evening by the heart-stirring declarations of a sterling American citizen of foreign birth—the Hon. James J. Davis, secretary of labor in the cabinet of President Harding.

Rich in simple phraseology, probing the very innermost depths of some of America's problems, emphasizing the need of more common fealty to human aims and rights and picturing in vivid language without bombast or glaring colors the hopes and desires of the toilers in the workshops of the land who aspire to some of the blessings that the Creator would have them receive if men of power and wealth would only see the value of valorous service for the benefit of all instead of the intolerant few, the remarkable personal message brought to Lowell's sturdy citizenry, men, women and children of many races and tongues, last evening, will be remembered for a long time to come.

200,000 IN OTHER CITIES GET BOOST

Fall River and New Bedford Mills Grant Advance to 75,000 Operatives

BOSTON, April 3.—Only Lowell among the principal textile centers of New England, was not included today in the wage advance announced elsewhere almost generally at 12½ per cent., and effective April 30. J. C. Wadleigh, president of the Lowell Cotton Manufacturers' association leaving Lowell for this city today, would say only that he was not ready to make any announcement today.

The announcement yesterday by the cotton mills of Fall River and New Bedford that they would grant an advance of 12½ per cent. which affects about 75,000 persons in those two cities, brought to more than 200,000 the number of textile workers who will share in the higher wages announced in the past fortnight.

Assuming an average wage of $18 to $20 weekly payrolls will be increased approximately $25,000,000 in the year beginning April 30, as a result of the advances in the textile industry in New England. These figures are on the basis of an increase of 12½ per cent., which has been the amount almost invariably named.

In Fall River, however, the Textile council has yet to agree to accept the 12½ per cent. advance instead of their 15 per cent. demand, and the United Textile Workers have indicated that they will continue their movement to make the increase 20¼ per cent.

Lowell employs about 23,000 persons in its textile plants, principally cotton mills.

Another of the lesser cotton centers —Taunton—is also uncommitted to the advance as yet. An official of the Cotton Manufacturers' association in that city said today, however, that a meeting had been called for tomorrow afternoon to consider the situation adding that Taunton almost invariably followed the action of Fall River in wage adjustments.

WADLEIGH SAYS NO ANNOUNCEMENT

Agent Jude C. Wadleigh of the Merrimack Mfg. Co., who is president of the Lowell Cotton Manufacturers' association and who by virtue of his office generally acts as spokesman for the various cotton mills of the city, stated this morning that there was nothing new here relative to a wage increase. Mr. Wadleigh was on his way to the railroad station, going to Boston, when he was seen by The Sun man and he stated that there would be no announcement today. When questioned as to whether or not an announcement would be made tomorrow, he replied: "I can only say there will be no announcement today. What will happen in the future, I do not know."

Council President Suggests That Committee of Councilors Confer With Mayor and Public Service Board in an Effort to Discuss Widening of Hall and Aiken Streets

In conformity with the recommendation of Mayor John J. Donovan in the communication which accompanied his veto of the $30,000 order for the purpose of widening Hall and Aiken streets at their intersection, President James J. Gallagher of the city council will suggest to that body at its meeting tonight that a committee of councilors be appointed to confer with the mayor and the public service board in an effort to agree upon some other solution of the vexing traffic situation now existing there.

It will be recalled that in his veto

NIGHT WATCHMAN FOUND IN DAZED CONDITION WITH BULLET WOUND IN HEAD

Entering the office of the Gulf Refining company in Tanner street about 8 o'clock this morning, C. E. Blake, local agent of the company, found Frank H. Barry of 1167 Gorham street, night watchman, sitting on a chair in a dazed condition with a bullet wound on the right side of his head and the company's 32-caliber revolver by his side. Although refusing to divulge the nature of the circumstances surrounding the head wound, investigation showed that a bullet had been fired from the revolver, glancing the man's head and lodging in a nearby wall. The wound was not sufficient to render him unconscious and the flow of blood was not profuse. The ambulance was summoned and upon its arrival, Barry walked from the office unassisted. At the Corporation hospital, where he was taken, it was stated that his name is not on the dangerous list.

According to Agent Blake, Barry has been employed as night watchman on the Tanner street premises for the past eight or nine years and has always performed his duties in a creditable manner. About two years ago his wife died of influenza, leaving him morose and discouraged, but his actions never betrayed any feeling of desperation. Company officials were surprised, therefore, when informed of the accident this morning.

URGES CONSOLIDATION

Lovett Says Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Sytsems Should Be Merged

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific systems should be consolidated, if the old Hill rail lines in the west are united, Robert S. Lovett, chairman of the Union Pacific, declared at a hearing yesterday before Henry C. Hall, a member of the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Lovett declared that teh consolidation of the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Burlington, as proposed by Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad in his "four system" plan for consolidating western railroads would set up a system for overshadowing the competitors provided by that project.

Mr. Lovett declared that the consolidation of the Great Northern, the North Pacific and the Burlington, as proposed by Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad in his "four system" plan for consolidating western railroads would set up a system for overshadowing the competitors provided by that project.

Criticizing the Holden plan in detail, he asserted it sent both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific "far afield into territories where they have never been and where there is apparently no reason for them to go," and added:

The Union Pacific head also disagreed with Mr. Holden's view that each Pacific coast road should have a line extending to the Gulf of Mexico, asserting that the east and west traffic was the important and controlling factor with transcontinental lines and that the Holden plan would disarrange long existing export grain arrangements through Atlantic ports by favoring gulf ports.

Of the general matter of consolidation, Mr. Lovett said the commission's own plan, providing for seven systems should be departed from only with great caution.

"To guard against possible misunderstanding of my views," said Mr. Lovett, "I should like to add that I believe entirely too much is expected in some quarters with respect to these consolidations. Good undoubtedly will come from legal consolidation into one company of lines naturally allied and grown together as one system but legally held by numerous different corporations loosely combined in common control through stock ownership."

CHEAP LIVING LURES AMERICANS TO GERMANY

COBLENZ, April 3.—The cheap living in this part of the Rhine country continues to attract many Americans abroad, many of whom came here originally to visit the American occupation zone.

The occupied territories all along the Rhine enjoy the advantage of having prices regulated, in a manner not possible in unoccupied Germany, where Americans and other strangers sometimes complain they are overcharged, or else compelled to pay higher prices than Germans. The living is cheap because of the relative worthlessness of the mark when exchanged for the dollar or the pound sterling.

How it works out for the German is another matter. What is cheap to the foreigner is dear to him.

In the case of automobile drivers, the American may use a taxi for a day and the entire bill will not be more than three or four dollars, out of which sum the driver gets the equivalent of 25 cents.

In other words, the average daily pay of the skilled workman is 3,000 to 4,000 marks. This also applies to railway workers of all classes.

When it is noted that a man's shirt cost 15,000 to 20,000 marks, and a pair of shoes 30,000 to 60,000 marks, and both articles of second grade quality, it may be inferred how high the depreciated mark has put the cost of living for the German.

One of these skilled laborers, now driving an automobile for hire, was an infantry captain during the war. After the war he worked for the British army of occupation, and by great good luck made some money when the reduced British forces began selling off supplies. He accumulated a capital in marks the equivalent of $10,000.

With this sum he decided to buy a farm and take his wife and children to the country. He bought a 300-acre farm near Coblenz and went to work. His surplus he invested in farm equipment, horses, stock and seeds.

By the summer of 1920 he had a fine harvest, but the diminished value of the mark cut his crop and land values in two. This process continued until he failed.

He sold most of his land and is now obliged to work for a few thousand marks a day, with the mark still depreciating in value and prices going higher. He and his family now eat black bread and wear rags.

$65,423,000 PAID IN CHURCH PENSIONS

CHICAGO, April 3—Pension funds of eighteen Protestant denominations in the United States amount to $65,423,000, according to a statement issued by Dr. J. R. Hingeley, Chairman of the Interdenominational Secretaries Conference in charge of the church pension funds of Protestant churches.

The amount is divided as follows: Northern Baptist, $9,000,000; Southern Baptist, $975,000; Congregational, $5,750,000; Disciples, $175,000; Lutheran, Augustana, $337,000; Lutheran, Missouri Synod, $2,500,000; Lutheran, Norwegian, $500,000; Lutheran United, $150,000; Methodist, Canadian, $2,500,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, $17,500,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $2,000,000; Presbyterian Church, Northern, $8,105,000; Presbyterian Church, Southern, $1,400,000; Presbyterian United, $327,000; Protestant Episcopal, $18,250,000; Reformed Church in the United States, $191,000; Reformed Church in America, (Dutch), $393,000; United Brethren, $900,000.

The number of pensioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church is constantly increasing, declared Dr. Hingeley. "The retired Methodist ministers number 3,400, an increase of more than 46 over 1921," he said. "There are 3,857 widows, an increase this year of 29. The dependent orphans are 861, an increase of 46. The total number of persons on the pension fund of the Methodist Episcopal Church is 8,018, an increase of 120 over 1921. The total paid by the Methodist Episcopal Church for pensions in 1922 was $2,586,346, an increase over 1921 of $161,767.

"In 1870 the Methodist Episcopal Church contributed through collections in the church $120,998; in 1880, $130,944; 1890, $137,093; 1900, $360,402; 1908, $606,000; 1915, $1,225,226. This was the first year after the organization of the Board of Conference Claimants and in 1922 $2,586,346 was paid.

"The annual conferences with the largest investment in cash are Kansas $542,027, Detroit $527,162, New England $458,792, Illinois $414,000, Baltimore $420,716, Central Pennsylvania $409,700, Nebraska $333,000, Indiana $315,161, Central New York $308,241, Michigan $295,667, Erie $292,600, New England Southern $196,000, Tennessee $128,005, Central Illinois $161,526, Central German $131,063, Colorado $102,660 and Chicago German $100,000."

FLORIDA LOWEST STATE IN UNION

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Florida, speaking physically, is the lowest state of the union.

The geological survey has just completed a topographical investigation showing that the peninsula state's highest elevation, located in Polk county and known as "Iron Mountain," is only 325 feet above sea level. The widely known Everglades, comprising an area 150 miles long and about 100 miles broad, are at an average elevation of less than 50 feet above the sea, while the surface of the shallow lake within them, Okeechobee, is not quite 20 feet above sea level.

Even the one or two ridges within the borders of the state scarcely rise to 300 feet elevation. The capital, Tallahassee, is located on the slope of one of the uplands, and within the city border the elevation varies from 300 feet above sea level to less than 80 feet.

NEW CHASSIS TO ASSURE SAFE LANDING

LONDON, April 3.—An airplane undercarriage that is practically "uncrushable" is the remarkable product of a British inventor. The new landing chassis looks to the uninitiated like any ordinary two-wheeled undercarriage, but it is fitted with an ingenious system of pneumatic cylinders which prevent accidents even when the machine is being landed by an inexperienced pilot.

In a recent test of the new undercarriage Herbert Hikler, holder of the non-stop flight record to Turin, demonstrated that it would withstand shocks which would smash the ordinary chassis. He flew the machine at full speed into the ground from a height of 20 feet at an angle that would have turned an ordinary airplane over on its nose. The undercarriage absorbed the shock without even bouncing.

MISCONDUCT IN WASHINGTON

Mrs. Poindexter's Exposures of Drinking and Gambling Basis of Inquiry

SPOKANE, Wash., April 3.—Mrs. Miles Poindexter's newspaper letters concerning activities in Washington, D. C., society, with particular stress on drinking and gambling, are the basis of petitions ready for circulation here today addressed to Attorney General Daugherty and asking grand jury investigation of the alleged misconduct.

Plans were announced for seeking signers to the petitions in other western cities, including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle.

The head of the committee in charge is H. C. Harris of Spokane. Co-operation of religious organizations in making the petition a success will be sought. The expenses will be met by private subscriptions, he added.

Mrs. Poindexter, wife of former United States Senator Poindexter, who now is ambassador to Peru, wrote her first letter to a local newspaper. It caused so much comment that others were sought and her "exposures" of Washington society life are appearing in a number of papers as a weekly feature.

The petition as outlined by Mr. Harris includes one presented last week to the Spokane Federated Women's Christian Temperance union, asking further information from Mrs. Poindexter. The union forwarded that petition to its Washington, D. C. representative without action or endorsement.

In addition, Mr. Harris' petition carries paragraphs laudatory of Mrs. Poindexter. The eight queries of the petition presented to the W.C.T.U. are included as follows:

"What is the name of the senator whose wife was an expectant mother who was dizzy with strong drink?

"At whose home was a certain card party held at which there were three subjects of conversation (a liquor) (b, where to get it and what price) and (c, where to have it tested?)

"Who was the farm bloc senator who would not give his wife large sums of money to gamble with?

"What modern apartment house in Washington has a liquor tester as part of its equipment?

"Who was the senator's wife who said she could have liquor tested at this apartment house?

"What are the names of senators, representatives and cabinet officers in whose homes liquor is served to guests?

"In what embassy is liquor served?

"What are the names of the high officials of the government in whose homes gambling at bridge is permitted?"

TO CORRECT SCIATICA AND NEURALGIA

Try the Treatment That This Brockton Woman Found So Successful

Neuralgia is due to malnutrition or nerve starvation. The pain of neuralgia has been described by an eminent scientist as "the cry of a nerve for food." The most direct way to correct neuralgia is to build up the blood so that it can give the nerves the elements they need.

Sciatica, or sciatic rheumatism, as it is sometimes called, is neuralgia of the sciatic nerve. It is stubborn in resisting treatment but calls for the same remedy as sciatica.

Mrs. James H. Martin, of No. 68 Denton street, Brockton, Mass., suffered for two years with sciatic rheumatism. She says:

"My trouble first started with a pain low down on my left side and seemed confined to a space about the size of a half dollar. It was a dull aching pain and made me very nervous. Gradually it grew worse and became sharp and shooting. I became very miserable, my blood was thin and I had but little color.

"I had medical attention but got very little relief until through reading about them in a newspaper, I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. After I had taken the first box I noticed improvement. They effected a great change for the better in my blood. I took five boxes altogether and the pains are entirely gone. I am satisfied that the pills exactly suited my case and I have recommended them to others."

Dr. Williams Pink Pills are useful in anemia, or thin blood, nervousness and its more aggravated forms of sick headache, neuralgia, sciatica and neuritis. They give new strength and vigor and if you need this tonic you should get a sixty-cent box from your nearest druggist today and begin the treatment.

INTERNATIONAL COURT

American Membership Probably Will be Used by Harding as Subject on Tour

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 3.—American membership in the international court of justice probably will be used by President Harding as a subject of one or more speeches on his proposed western tour, it was said here today by members of the president's vacation party. Last night the president talked for some time with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university on the subject.

Dr. Butler recommended the proposal of membership in the international court as an issue which the republican party could safely carry before the country. Arguments that such membership would involve the United States in the League of Nations are illogical, he asserted.

SPENT NIGHT IN CELL

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Arrested on a charge of illegal possession and sale of liquor, although claiming diplomatic immunity because he claimed to be connected with the Cuban legation, Maris Fragrals, 23, spent last night in a police cell.

Fragrals, who told the police he came to Washington recently from Cuba, was arrested after he is alleged to have sold half a case of rum to a policewoman. A search of Fragrals' rooms was said by the police to have yielded another half case.

LOUISIANA TO CHECK WASTE OF GAS

MONROE, La., April 3.—The United States bureau of mines, having declared that the natural gas in this country is not inexhaustible, and that the supply is dwindling rapidly, persons interested in conservation of Louisiana's natural resources are launching a campaign with the object of either putting an end to the existence of carbon black plants in this state, or at least curbing their operations.

The north Louisiana gas field is the largest producing field in the world, and the wells in the Ouachita-Morehouse district now are giving up the enormous total of 1,380,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily for the manufacture of carbon black. Ninety per cent of this gas is wasted, it is claimed, and the conservationists have determined to do something to put a stop to it, if for no other reason than that industries in search of cheap fuel hesitate to locate in or near the field for fear the gas will be exhausted in the near future.

The Texas legislature recently refused to enact a law which would have permitted the establishment of carbon black plants in the gas fields now being developed in that state, and it is expected the Louisiana legislature at its next session will be called upon to take steps to remedy the situation here.

Carbon black is used for many purposes, the best known of which is in the manufacture of printer's ink. It is nothing more than what is commonly known as soot, and its production is a simple process. The natural gas flame is permitted to burn against a metal plate across which a mechanical scraper moves. The carbon, or soot, is scraped off, falls into a conveyor and is carried to the packing room.

Profits from the business are enormous, and any attempt to break it up is certain to meet with stiff opposition, as was the case when the question was considered at the state constitutional convention two years ago.

The cost of drilling and piping a gas well which will produce from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 feet of gas daily is placed at $20,000. Construction of a carbon plant capable of producing 3,600 pounds of carbon daily requires $100,000. The cost of a gasoline absorption plant which will produce from the gas, as a by-product, from 1500 to 2000 gallons of gasoline daily is $50,000. The total investment represents $170,000.

The 3,600 pounds of carbon at 15 cents a pound will bring $540 and 1500 gallons of gasoline at 15 cents a gallon $225, a gross daily operating income of $765. Operating expenses and supplies approximate $225 daily, leaving a net profit of $540. The net profit in one year is slightly less than $200,000 on an investment of $170,000. The plants are virtually automatic in operation, and Governor Parker has declared he knows of one consuming 10,000,000 feet of gas daily with a force of only 11 men. The plants operate night and day, seven days a week.

Louisiana in 1921 produced 31,034,000 pounds of carbon black, or 53 per cent of the country's total output, and to do so burned 32,101,800,000 cubic feet of gas.

REQUIEM MASSES

ROWLANDSON—There will be a requiem mass for the repose of the soul of Mudwena M. Rowlandson, Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock in the Immaculate Conception church.

Council Will Consider Mayor's $30,000 Veto

of the order the mayor did not condemn the idea, in fact, expressed the belief that some measure of relief should be worked out, but he did declare that he felt the $30,000 cost exorbitant.

It was learned today that the board of public service will give a public hearing on the matter on Thursday, April 12, at which time it is expected a full discussion will take place.

The council cannot take any action upon the veto tonight, but during the seven days that must elapse President Gallagher hopes a committee in conferences can straighten out the matter satisfactorily.

The council tonight will conduct a public hearing on the proposition of Councilor Cosgrove to acquire the Washington Tavern property and property adjacent to it, as a site for a new building proposed to house police and fire department headquarters. It is understood that remonstrance will develop, but it is expected the matter will receive general and thorough discussion.

MAN FLOGGED IN TEXAS

K. K. K. Denies Connection With Whipping of R. W. Burleson

TAYLOR, Tex., April 3.—R. W. Burleson of Wear, Tex., a small town near here, was in a hospital today recovering from a flogging Sunday night. His head was gashed and his shoulders mutilated.

Representatives here of the K.K.K. denied connection with the whipping, and the police apparently had no clue.

According to Burleson, the police said, he had been notified by a preacher that an attack was to be made on him. The preacher handed him a card bearing the name of the "Ku Klux Klan No. 176 of Georgetown," Burleson said, adding that he was told he must quiet going with a certain woman. He had scoffed at the notice, he told the police.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN MICHIGAN ELECTION

DETROIT, April 3.—Republican voters of Michigan "swung back into line and made a splendid start for the presidential campaign," Burt D. Cady, chairman of the state republican central committee, declared today in discussing yesterday's election, in which the entire republican ticket of minor state officers was victorious.

Democrats found some encouragement in the election of Frank E. Doremus, former congressman, as mayor of Detroit, but republicans pointed out that the mayoralty election was nonpartisan. Doremus won over James W. Inches, former public service commissioner.

WILSON "LISTENED IN" ON LEAGUE ADDRESS

NEW YORK, April 3.—Woodrow Wilson listened to the address of Lord Cecil on the League of Nations here last night, by radio, at his home in Washington.

When it was announced that the former president was hearing the address, the diners at the Hotel Astor rose to their feet and cheered. Mrs. Wilson, who was present, smiled happily as she joined in the tribute to her husband.

Mrs. Wilson is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Baruch on her first visit to New York in two years.

PROHIBITION IN EFFECT IN TURKEY

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 3.—The authorities put into effect today the delayed prohibition order in response to instructions from Angora.

A Turkish prohibition decree was to have been put into effect on March 1 but its promulgation was postponed indefinitely, dispatches said, because of the large liquor contracts involved. The nationalist authorities last December ruled that no alcohol could enter Turkey after December 5, and that stocks on hand must be consumed before March 1.

SMALL DOCKET IN THE DISTRICT COURT

This morning's docket in the district court was the smallest in two months, continuances until Saturday being granted George Kalimirides for non-support, Louis G. Morin for unlawful cohabitation, and a continuance until tomorrow, to Cecile Dube, charged with being a stubborn child.

Four Die in Hotel Fire

Two children of Mrs. Bouchard, aged 2 and 5.

Joe Madora, the owner of the hotel, was severely burned on the back, face and hands. Arrangements were made to take him to Presqu Isle hospital this afternoon. Paul Parent of Grand Falls, N. B., was burned about the neck and head. Mrs. Mary Roix of Massachusetts sustained burns on the arms and feet.

The fire caught from a stove in the hall on the ground floor, thus cutting off escape by the stairway and hall for the 15 persons in the house. An exciting scene followed some of the guests and servants being taken out of the windows and down ladders by those first to respond to the alarm, while others jumped to the ground.

The Bouchard children were found in bed where they had been suffocated. The mother's body was found on the floor of the room which they occupied. She apparently had been awakened but was overcome by smoke before she could make even an attempt to save her children.

Through a misunderstanding when help first came, they were told there was no one upstairs, but later the bodies were found.

NOVEL WAGES TO PAY TUITION CHARGES

CHICAGO April 3—The odd occupations followed by students at mid-western universities to pay their way through school range all the way from serving as state legislator to sleeping in undertaking establishments to save room rent.

The state legislator is Everett A. Addington, of Indiana University, member of the house of representatives. He is blind, and to add to his income from the state he tunes pianos. His home is at Farmland, Ind.. The boys who have solved their room rent problem by working in undertaking establishments in return for quarters attend the University of Nebraska.

Ordinary occupations, trades and avocations followed by thousands of students to help pay expenses are too numerous to enumerate; Indiana University alone reports 55 trades and employments. Some of the occupations are unusual.

At Kansas State Agricultural College a young man does housework and watches children while parents are absent. This institution has a detective whose occupation has been tracking cigarette bootleggers for the mayor of his town. Another boy there sells salad dressing, while a pair of boys hung out this sign: "Dancing Lessons and Ford Repairs."

A University of Nebraska boy took a contract to paint a house, and employed student help to finish the job. Honor stands, where sweets are sold without attendants, are not uncommon. A boy at Nebraska, operating such stands, reported his net profits averaged 65 cents daily.

At Washington University, St. Louis, a student firm issues free blotter pads, making money out of the advertising thereon. The giving of blood for transfusion is a regular occupation of some University of Minnesota students. Marquette University reports one grave digger, and an athlete who makes money as a dance hall bouncer.

Indiana University, in addition to Mr. Addington has two other blind students paying their way, a girl who crochets, and a boy who sells sandwiches.

At Purdue about 75 per cent of the men are helping to pay their own way, while many young women also work. Among the Purdue workers is a young night engineer whose only hours of sleep are from 4.00 p. m. to 9.30 p. m., yet he has a prospect of winning the highest honors for four years of scholarship.

At Ohio University students earn money for tuition in various ways. Some are official bearers of bodies at funerals, some teach Hebrew on the side, and one leases a house and sublets the rooms.

The Missouri legislature has under consideration a bill to appropriate $35,000 yearly for the employment of student labor.

MAN OF 60 REGAINS VIGOR HE HAD AT 35

D. W. Wood, 60, of New Orleans, La., declares he has virtually been made young again by the recently discovered Korex Compound, which is pronounced superior to "gland treatments" as an invigorator and revitalizer. "It has brought me back to as good, healthy physical condition as I enjoyed at 35," he writes. "I am apparently as supple as at 25." Mr. Wood says he would not take $5000 for what the compound has done for him.

The compound is a simple home treatment in tablet form, absolutely harmless, yet the most powerful invigorator known. Acting directly on lower spinal nerve centres and certain blood vessels, it often produces amazing benefits in 24 to 36 hours. In nation-wide tests, it has won the praises of thousands who suffered from nerve weakness, premature age and lack of vital force. Physicians say it gives speedy satisfaction in cases that defy other treatments. Elderly people pronounce it a real "fountain of youth."

Knowing that this news may seem "too good to be true," the distributors invite any person needing the compound to take a $2 double-strength treatment, enough for ordinary cases, with the understanding that it costs nothing if it fails. If you wish to try this guaranteed invigorator, write in strict confidence to the Melton Laboratories, 45 Massachusetts Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. If you prefer, you may enclose $2; or simply send your name, without money, and pay the postman $2 and postage on delivery. In either case, if you report after one week that the Korex Compound has not given you satisfaction, the laboratories will return your money immediately. This offer is fully guaranteed, so nobody need hesitate about accepting it.—Adv.

HAS U. S. DONE ENOUGH?

NEW YORK, April 3.—Fear and suspicion, twin demons which have possessed the world, and can be exorcised only by some form of an association of nations, are the forces that stand between France and Germany in the settlement of the reparations question, as they stand in the way of settlement of every other international question, Lord Cecil, noted British exponent of the League of Nations, declared in an address before the Foreign Policy association last night.

Addressing his first American audience, Lord Robert, who has come to the United States for a series of speeches on behalf of the league, declared it was essential for world safety to "turn the minds of nation from force as the only remedy."

"Take the question of reparations," he said. "What is it that makes that question so intractable? It is that though the French are anxious for the Germans to pay, they are also anxious lest, if they are allowed to get on their feet sufficiently to pay, they will become again a danger to the security of France.

"Do not think I am attacking the French on that account.

American Cities Might Be Bombed

"We have to get a new spirit among the nations of the world. We have got to teach them that persuasion, public opinion, are of far greater potency than mere physical compulsion."

He said that in the next war, if one came, it was not conceivable that American cities might be laid waste and their populations destroyed by airmen flying from over the sea.

He said the three most terrible arms of warfare—aircraft, submarine and land forces—had not been at all affected by the Washington treaties. There was little likelihood, he declared, that rules for submarine use would be respected.

"Certainly the experience of the last war is against any such hope," he said. "Scarcely one rule for the humanizing of warfare was observed, and though we may think that our enemies were the worst, yet in all candor and frankness, I doubt if there is any single nation which has a clean sheet in the matter."

Asks Can America Avoid War

Citing the achievements of the League of Nations, he concluded:

"I do not come as a suppliant for American help. I come to tell you what, as it seems to me, the league really is and what it has done, and to hear from you any criticisms or advice as to its action.

"I do not doubt or undervalue for a moment the immense services America has rendered in recent years to Europe. But has America done enough for herself?

"She desired and rightly desires to be free from the entanglements of Europe and its concerns. But can she be free from them?

"In 1917 America felt compelled to enter the World war. It was not that she desired war—far from it. Will anyone say that if another great European war took place involving, as wars always do, great interests of right and wrong, that it would be possible in the future any more than in the past for America to stand outside and take no part?

"If it be really true that even on this side of the Atlantic there is no certainty that this nation can avoid the worst of all entanglements—participation in war—is it really so unreasonable to suggest that it is an American interest to erect safeguards against the outbreak of war in any part of the world, for when war breaks out, no one can tell how far it will spread.

"It is for you here to say what answer should be given to this question. In any case, we in Europe must go on. We cannot draw back from this great experiment. We are bound by every obligation of prudence and honor to pursue it to the end."

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and bent over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I read some letters in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told my husband about his wife and what good it had done her and wanted him to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time, and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I sure am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female ailments, for I know by experience what it can do. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, also the Liver Pills, too, and think them fine."—Mrs. WM. ELDRIDGE, 620 E. Grant Street, Marion, Indiana.

A record of nearly fifty years service should convince you of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Stirring Address by Secretary Davis

intimate testimonial of high regard and confidence in which the people of Lowell as a whole played a memorable part. The scenes outside and within the great Auditorium just before 5.15 o'clock, when the distinguished cabinet officer from Washington was scheduled to appear and deliver his address on "Labor, Immigration and Naturalization," will long be remembered by every man and woman who participated in this meeting.

That more than ordinary interest had been created in the advance announcements of Mr. Davis' coming, was very evident when hundreds of curious visitors, attracted to the Auditorium by the formal news reports of the meeting program, stood on the main entrance steps of the Auditorium and inspected the throng of eager men, women and young people of both sexes who crowded the outside promenade walks on their way to the late afternoon rally of Lowell's citizenship.

It was a typical Lowell throng of the usual rank and file that awaited Mr. Davis at the Auditorium. Business men, bankers, representatives of leading textile corporations, industrial agents, superintendents, merchants of the city, store clerks, women and girls who gain livelihood in mills, stores and private offices—even eager newsboys were there to see what there was to see and hear what might be said.

Congressman Rogers Presides

The appearance of the medium-sized, trim-looking athletic figure of Secretary Davis leading the way across the Auditorium platform at the head of a long line of Lowell business men forming the Rotarian reception committee, was the signal for prolonged applause from those in floor seats and galleries.

Congressman John Jacob Rogers was called upon to introduce the evening's chief guest, and was warmly welcomed. He briefly expressed his pleasure at the honor of presenting "the visitor from the Harding official family," and praised the chief guest who, he said, was born 50 years ago in a little town in Wales and came to America to work his way up the ladder to a his position in American citizenship. The congressman referred to the fact that Mr. Davis went to work in a Pennsylvania town steel and iron works at the age of 11 years and that is one reason why today the secretary of labor has taken such a warm interest in American toilers, particularly the problem that has to do with the curse of child labor, and its many depressing evils.

"Allow me to introduce you to our secretary of labor," said Mr. Rogers in closing his introductory remarks, "a secretary who labors for labor, a man who has risen to one of the greatest positions in the cabinet of the president of the United States of America—the Hon. James J. Davis."

Vigorous applause greeted the visiting secretary, all present rising and standing.

Secretary Davis' Address

He landed those who were responsible for the Auditorium and declared that no finer tribute could be erected to the memory of the heroes of war who fought for their country with such valor, he declared, that the monument wherein he spoke must and should be an inspiration to the boys and girls of Lowell for preserving good government. It is even worthy of holding therein a national democratic or republican convention, the secretary added, amid laughter and general applause. He stated that a splendid hall of merit in design has also just been erected in Moosehearf, Ill., for the great fraternal order of Moose which he has the honor of representing in official channels. He added that he was mighty glad to receive an invitation to Lowell, glad that he had accepted the invitation and immensely proud of the new friends that he had made so quickly in this city.

He then launched into his main address, covering vividly many present-day questions of labor, immigration and naturalization. He declared that his arduous work in the public service department as a cabinet official included the adjudication of labor troubles, the handling of many different and important bureaus, naturalization, immigration problems, the collecting of business and labor statistics, looking after the heart-breaking problems of women and children employed in various industries of the country and also participating in the activities of the new federal board of vocational education.

The secretary declared that today 42,000,000 inhabitants of the nation are gainfully employed, Bureaus survey the wages paid in industries of all kinds, make recommendations and endeavor to adjudicate dangerous disputes in working conditions with ramified problems on the side for good measure. The difficulties and trials of the secretary of labor are not only arduous, but call for humane endeavors in every line of every-day affairs that involve workingmen and women and organized capital, Mr. Davis said.

"The power of wealth is enormous," said Mr. Davis. "If you lower wages $1 dollar per day, there is a loss of the workers' purchasing power amounting to $41,000,000 a day. Today it is a business proposition that confronts the country—the proposition of having men receive the highest possible wages. And when men are employed at decent wages, the purchasing power of the workers is higher and the country more prosperous every time. When the coal miners' wages were cut in two, as they were once upon a time not long ago, and when they were employed but three or four days per week and only during certain periods of the year at that, the country's loss in wages and business was quickly felt."

He told of the coal mine operations that at one time had outputs totalling 500,000,000 tons a year and of the effect caused by the cutting down of the national output to 250,000,000 tons.

He described briefly the effect that coal shortages and the lowering of the nation's wage earnings have on the country as a whole. He told of deplorable conditions in many industrial communities apart from the coal territories, where wages were low today, where employes have to purchase goods in "company stores" and where they have no opportunity to save any money for future needs. He declared sternly that it was not fair to loyal American workingmen and women to work for unfair wages or for merely "living wages."

Living Wage Not Enough

"Paying the workers only enough money to meet their rents and secure just enough to eat and barely clothe themselves, is not justice today, and never was!" declared Secretary Davis, warming up to his subject.

"The workers' wages ought to be large enough on Saturday nights not only to pay all bills for the maintaining of the homes, educating and clothing the children, but there ought to be money left over to put into savings banks and protect the families in the future!" (Applause.)

Amendment to Prohibit Child Labor

"My friend Rogers here (turning to the congressman) knows that we ought to keep the children out of the mills and put them into the schoolhouses. John is in accord with my sentiments. We need more education for the children instead of mill work. But what do we see on every hand in this country today? Children of 7, 8, 9 and 10 years of age working in some textile mills in some parts of the land, and laws prohibiting children's toil in other sections. This irregular labor problem involving youth of America must be abolished! It must be stopped—this employment of mere children in industrial establishments! A constitutional amendment must be passed to stop them from going into the mills of this country to toil with their elders." (Applause.)

Mr. Davis declared that conditions in the field of employment, labor and industry, must be radically changed. Today too many children cry for food, men are out of work. And when that condition arises, as it frequently does, the women and children always suffer first.

Hits Railroads and Coal Barons

"And, Oh! the price they had to pay—the people!" went on the speaker. "It was a disgrace to civilization! No pirates of the Spanish Main ever committed the deeds that the railroad coal barons of this country performed! (Applause) How they held, up this country you all know. And at what a price! (Applause).

"But these things will right themselves in the end. And I wish to God that yesterday, Easter Sunday, those men saw the Golden Rule. I hope they did or some of them. Wouldn't it be glorious if they did?" (Applause).

Work For Disabled Soldiers

Mr. Davis told of the good work that has been done for the rehabilitation of disabled soldiers, declared strongly that President Harding wanted to do everything possible to take care of the war veterans and their dependents, and said that the estimated first cost of some $140,000,000 was approved, and the estimated future cost of $500,000,000 also endorsed, for the government intends to take care of the boys who fought the good fight.

He explained in some detail the rehabilitation plans that are now being completed and prophesied that "better times" are coming for all who are looking to the administration for relief and succor in the work of rehabilitating the veterans who won the World war.

He declared that America is in better shape today because American business men "are learning something." America's great heart, he added, is safe with the workingman who toils from early morning to night. He decried the fact that so many women today are engaged in industry, but declared that the nation is improving its laws and remedying many labor problems and evils right along.

"Don't berate our business men!" continued Mr. Davis. "Talk to them and they'll try to do the right thing. Encourage them! Women today are better treated than they were in the days that are gone. It used to be necessary for many more women to leave their children at home and go to work to keep their homes. It is all wrong, of course, but times are changing."

The secretary praised the mother love that causes many to slave and toil for their offspring and declared that the toilers of the feminine sex today remain a great problem. He said he believed that a movement for the better was under way, and he spoke not for the republican party or Congressman Rogers, but for "Jim" Davis.

He said there are 30 languages spoken in his home town in Pennsylvania and he still lives there and is happy there. All the workers desire, he said, is to live and learn and understand, and receive decent treatment.

Wants Selective Immigration

"There is room in America today for good men and women," Mr. Davis continued, "but I hate, as much as you do, the undesirables." He then launched into a vigorous statement for "real selective immigration or none at all." Applause followed this declaration. Mr. Davis continued that "now was the time for the selective system."

"Some business men believe in letting the bars down and getting all the cheap foreign labor they want.

"Far from it! Let 2,000,000 of them come into this country tomorrow and not more than 100,000 would be worthy of receiving our welcome; the rest would be parasites on our country. This campaign to get foreign labor; now under way, is simply to work us!"

The speaker told of his coming to America from Wales with his six brothers and sisters, accompanied by his father and mother. His father, he said, could not read or write. His parents came resolved to become good American citizens and secure work that they might bring up their children to be good Americans. Mr. Davis said children ought to remain in the public schools until they reach the age of 16 years. And yet we today allow millions of aliens to come into this country and "don't care a cuss what becomes of them!" (Applause).

Mr. Davis said the people from foreign lands who come here to seek freedom and new homes have no leaders to tell them what to do. It must be our duty to relieve them of the "leeches and parasites" that now beset them—strangers in a strange land. Out of 236 foreigners who came to Lucern, Penn., 12 years ago, only 26 were accepted by a court judge there for American citizenship, and that was 12 years ago. About all the men and women could say when asked questions was "We are married."

Mr. Davis believed, he said vigorously, in compulsory education. If that was the rule in America, there wouldn't be so many jail birds in the land today. Not long ago 200 criminals were shipped to this country and they got in without any trouble at all, he added. We have spent millions of dollars on prisons and jails in this country, and today, the secretary went on, 40 per cent of the nation's insane are aliens and only 27 per cent Americans. The cost to provide for these institutions amounts to just 30 per cent of all the taxes collected in New York.

"God helps those who help themselves, but America first!" shouted the secretary loudly amid prolonged applause.

Mr. Davis reviewed briefly what he termed the "greatest attempt ever known" now being made in the U.S.A. to break down the present immigration laws. He cited the case of a foreign family being allowed to enter, but because one child was of unregistered birth, it was barred by Uncle Sam's officials at Ellis Island. The father had not taken the oath of allegiance, not thinking enough of America to do so. The birth occurred outside the three-mile limit. "But you can't stop babies!" added the secretary amid joyous laughter and applause.

Citing recent statistics in various industries, Mr. Davis said that out of one "block" of 94,004 workers, 12,497 were foreign-born. In a summary of 13,920,000 individuals, only 15,128 were checked as "superior." There were 3,325,435 of the total "very superior," 403,711 "fairly superior," and 1,116,211 with a "high average." Only 3,702,904 were marked "average," and 2,296,914 individuals were declared to be of "low average." One block of 4,287,573 were declared to be "inferior" and 2,600,262 "very inferior." In other words, the average was one good to five inferior in the 13 million catalogued intelligence survey.

Bootlegging in Immigration

"There is general bootlegging in immigration today on a par with liquor bootlegging," declared Secretary Davis. "They even come into this country in aeroplanes!"

He declared that civic righteousness must prevail in America if our civilization is to last. History shows that the average length of a successful civilization is only 500 years.

"We want to preserve our civilization—our priceless heritage!" said the speaker, vigorously, in closing. "If we don't preserve what we have and maintain our prestige hard-fought-for and well bought, there will be discontent and disaster and we shall be actually in a hell of a fix, with a brand of government over us all like Russia today!" (Applause).

The secretary closed by thanking the Rotarians, Mayor Donovan and the citizens of Lowell for their cordial reception and declared that his visit last evening to the new Memorial Auditorium "was a rare architectural and mental treat." He urged the citizens of Lowell to carry on the fight for selective immigration or none at all.

SECRETARY DAVIS GUEST AT ROTARIAN DINNER

Previous to coming Lowell yesterday afternoon, Secretary Davis was a guest earlier in the day of the Women's Republican club of Boston, where he delivered an address that was filled with interesting prophecies.

Upon arrival in this city escorted by Rotarian Harry G. Pollard, the cabinet member was conducted directly to Liberty hall in the Memorial Auditorium building, where the weekly dinner and meeting of the Rotarians was in full swing. The attendance at the business men of the city was never greater or at any formal "weekly," and the appearance of Secretary of Labor Davis, a former member of Rotary, was the signal for an ovation.

President Parker introduced Secretary Davis in a few well chosen words, expressing the genuine pleasure of both the Rotarians and every citizen of Lowell in the pleasure of having the distinguished cabinet official present as a guest of the people of the municipality. The welcome was one that showed beyond question that he genuine good-fellowship and cordiality of the Rotarians had touched a warm spot in the Davis heart and he made no attempt to conceal his sincere pleasure at the vigorous acclaim that was tendered in lavish fashion by leading Lowell men who meant to make it emphatic.

Secretary Davis expressed his delight for the cordial reception tendered by the Rotary clubmen and guests. He praised the promoters and builders of the Memorial Auditorium, which he called the most beautiful institution of its kind in the country today. He had a good word to say for Rotary, referring in particular to the good work done by Rotarians in many cities and towns in aiding child life.

He told an appealing story of a pathetic case involving a 12-year-old boy in Atlanta, Ga., that brought tears to the eyes of the members. The boy had been found in a hovel, creeping about on all fours like a beast in the forest. The Rotarians of Atlanta took the boy to a hospital, provided for his requirements for several years, and today the "four-footed monster" is a graceful, upstanding young man, a credit to his community and with work to do in American citizenship fields. The story was touching in its compelling force and description of the methods of saving one human life from blank despair, ignominy and uselessness.

The secretary praised international Rotarians for "shelling out" good-fellowship, ready aid to the unfortunate and dispensing the spirit that revives, stimulates and makes good in the community. Rotary, he declared emphatically, "works for the other fellow always." It is "big work, with the accent on the big." The speaker praised Rotarians for being sympathetic. Such men are greatly needed today, he continued.

More than 40,000,000 men in America are gainfully employed today, Mr. Davis went on. They are all Americans. The duty of all good citizens is to keep those men employed in the future.

Speaking of his own duties in Washington, Mr. Davis said he always welcomed friendly criticism. "Write to me men," he said, "when you have anything on your minds. Offer me your suggestions at any time if things don't suit you in my department. Service is what counts and I am prepared to give you and all good Americans the very best service I can."

Mr. Davis praised Congressman Rogers, who he called "friend John," and declared that the Lowell representative at Washington has been "doing things" and will "do a great many more things for the good of the republic in the days to come." Applause greeted the reference to Mr. Rogers.

He told of his personal affection for the laboring men and women of the land and said he had once toiled without a chance to secure a good school education, and knows the condition of those who labor today and what they have to battle against under many heart-breaking conditions. He hoped, he said, that the Rotary club and the Lowell chamber of commerce will get back of all movements to improve the citizenship of the country in the interests of true Americanism and ideals always, and had no doubts about Lowell from the appearance of those who were handling his reception in Lowell last evening, he said in concluding his address to the Rotarians.

HOW TO SLEEP ON A BARE FLOOR

IT is more a matter of SLEEP, than of bed or board.

There is always a reason for sleeplessness. Usually, it is a "sour" stomach, a liver that has "lain down" on the job, congested bowels, or biliousness.

Then, just before retiring, take Beecham's Pills. They soothe an uneasy stomach, encourage the organs of digestion and elimination to natural activity, and assure restful sleep no matter what!

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

FAMILY OF GOLDMAN AWAITS DAVIS' ACTION

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 3.—Decision of a commission of medical experts, in session at Ellis Island yesterday ordering Sammy Goldman, Syracuse schoolboy, deported to Rumania because of mental deficiency, came as a shock to the little refugee's mother and a surprise to the Americanization league, which since the lad's arrival two years ago had followed his progress at school with evident satisfaction.

Attorneys for the family and others interested in the case were prepared for any unfavorable decision, and it is their purpose to stay the sentence of deportation until all court efforts are exhausted. A writ of habeas corpus was understood to be the first step contemplated by Atty. Ralph Shultman, counsel for the family; thence the case may be carried to the United States supreme court. The family now awaits the action of Secretary of Labor Davis on the medical experts' report.

The case of Sammy has attracted nationwide attention. His father is an American citizen. The citizenship papers include Sammy as an American citizen. The boy, born in Russia, was buffeted about by the storms of war and finally landed in Rumania. His teachers assert he has mastered the English language during his brief stay here and has proved to be bright in classroom work.

SPOKE AT WOMEN'S CLUB

Interesting Talk by Miss Nichols on "Small Pleasure" Gardens

Miss Rose Standish Nichols spoke before the Middlesex Women's club yesterday on "Small Pleasure Gardens" and illustrated her most interesting talk with lantern slides in black and white and in color. Gardens in England and Europe, especially those of Spain, were very beautiful, while pictures of smaller plots in our own New England added local interest to the subject.

The club has received an appeal through the literature department of the state federation for a donation of 500 books in the drive being made in the interest of the American Merchant Marine Library association. Mrs. Otis L. Humphrey, president, asked that books be donated and left either at the club rooms or at the public library.

During a brief business meeting the president announced the following committee to present a list of club officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. John K. Whittier, Mrs. E. B. Carney, Miss Julia T. Pevey, Mrs. Tyler A. Stevens, Mrs. S. H. Thompson and Mrs J. Harry Boardman.

RECONSTRUCTION OF DRACUT SCHOOL

Members of the recommending committee in connection with the reconstruction of the Parker Avenue school in Dracut, which was destroyed by fire a couple of weeks ago, held a public meeting at the Goodhue schoolhouse last evening for the purpose of receiving suggestions from the residents of the neighborhood. The meeting, which was presided over by Chairman Fred Bassett was largely attended and great interest was shown in the project of reconstruction.

Among the suggestions offered, and which were well received by the committee were the following: The erection of an eight-room house on the site of the old school. The laying out of an assembly hall in the new building. That the new building be of brick construction, and the seizure of the land adjoining the school for playground purposes. All these recommendations will be submitted to the voters of the town at a meeting to be held later. The members of the committee are Fred Bassett, chairman; Hon. John T. Sparks, Peter Bolton, William O'Malley and Philippe Legare.

WILL TALK ON THE CANADIAN NORTHWEST

An address on the Canadian Northwest by Rev. Alphonse Archambault, O.M.I., and a radio concert conducted by Arthur Roberge, were features of the meeting of the C.M.A.C. Literary club, which was held last evening in the assembly hall of the association in Pawtucket street.

President Leon Lamoureux occupied the chair and he introduced Rev. Fr. Archambault, a former missionary, who is now connected with St. Joseph's parish of this city. The reverend gentleman related his experiences with the natives of Port Albany at Hudson bay and told of their mode of living and the hardships of missionaries in those regions. His remarks were very interesting. At the close of the address Mr. Roberge gave his radio concert, which included numbers from Montreal, Schenectady and other points. The program was very enjoyable.

The winners of today's contest will be eligible to take part in the final one to be held next Friday. The prize for the best essay is a Hamilton watch.

The judges have been selected and are Miss Helen Hogan, a member of the faculty of the State Normal school; Morton Sturtevant, head of the English department of the high school; and Major Walter Joyes, supervisor of safety instruction of the schools of the city.

CADETS TO GO TO SEA

NEW YORK, April 3.—Junior Naval Reserve cadets are to have opportunity this summer to gain sea experience in a practical way. Arrangements have been made with a steamship line crossing the Pacific to accept cadets for training, and the young men will be paid regular wages while at sea.

The Admiral Oriental Line, of Seattle, Washington, will carry three cadets in the engineering department on each of its five passenger steamers. One cadet will be selected from New York; the other 14 from Reserve Units on the Pacific coast. The Merchants and Miners Transportation Line, of Philadelphia, has taken on Naval Reserve cadets in the past and will do so again this summer. It prefers the cadets to boys who have had no training.

KILLS HER TWO CHILDREN AND ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

NEW YORK, April 3.—Mrs. Rose Martelli of the Bronx, yesterday cut the throats of her three and four-year-old sons and daughter and then slashed her own. The children died. The mother is under arrest at Fordham hospital.

Neighbors discovered the tragedy when, attracted by the odor of escaping gas, they forced the door of the Martelli apartment.

The woman, police believe, called the children into the kitchen separately and killed them. She later took the bodies into the bedroom and after turning on the gas, lay down beside them and cut her own throat.

NEW-COMER TO THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Charles E. Whelan, former superintendent of the local division of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company, today opened a real estate and insurance office in room 326 of Central block, 53 Central street. For a number of years he has been interested in this line of work, has had good experience in giving sales advice, appraising properties and handling real estate transactions large and small in various New England districts.

During the two years that he held down the street railway berth in this city, Mr. Whelan formed many real friendships and the new real estate offices opened this morning were visited during the day by numerous well-wishers eager to extend best wishes to the former street railway superintendent.

Mr. Whelan says that property in and about Lowell today is more desirable than ever before and he is prepared to give prompt service at all times in aiding buyers to find what they desire. Property appraisals will also be handled at the Whelan office, besides a general line of modern insurance business of many ramifications and desirability. The Whelan motto over the executive offices is "Service in Real Estate."

HOW SECRETARY DAVIS WON SUCCESS

Secretary Davis who spoke at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon is a very remarkable man, because of the manner in which he arose to prominence and educated himself through his virility of character and his knack of concentrating upon the work in hand.

Brought here from Wales by his parents as one of six children in 1880, when he was but eight years of age, his opportunities for schooling were almost negligible. His parents having settled in Pittsburgh, young Davis was sent to work as an iron puddler when 11 years old, and attracted attention by the enthusiasm with which he attacked every task set before him. Put to work at that early age, it would seem that his education and his life prospects were to be neglected and that for him there was no hope of rising to prominence in any direction but young Davis was not the kind of a boy that would plod along in a rut. Yet he never slighted the work in hand. Indeed his success was mainly due to his determination to excel in everything he undertook. Whether the nature of his work was good or bad, easy or difficult, agreeable or otherwise, he concentrated his energies upon doing it well. That is one of the surest roads to success. If a man is a bootblack, let him try to be the best bootblack in his neighborhood and he will get the trade.

Success came to Davis because he made his opportunities where boys without ambition would sink out of sight and be submerged in the millions that spend their lives at the base of the hill so to speak. Not all boys could accomplish what Davis did. There is more prejudice against boys of foreign nativity now than there was in those days. But the boy who keeps a single task in mind, who devotes his time and energies to that alone, will eventually rise to the height to which his talent will carry him.

It is true that environment has much to do with shaping the career of young men; but what environment could be more unfavorable than that in which a boy moves who works in a steel mill. Let it be admitted that Secretary Davis must have been endowed with more than average talent and what he possessed he used to the best advantage; but there are hundreds, perhaps, we might say thousands, of boys in this city who are equally gifted but who waste their energies in scattered effort, in pursuit of vain pleasures, in gambling or some other frivolity by which attention is diverted from the things that are really important. Secretary Davis, now a member of President Harding's cabinet, is a type of self-made man whose success may well be an inspiration to boys who become discouraged unless they are pushed into some nice job in which they will not have to soil their fingers. These artificial aids are of very little importance; and a boy who has the necessary grit had better dispense with them and stand on his own merits like James J. Davis, always ready to face hard work and to apply his skill and energy to the task set before him with indomitable courage and persistence. That is what counts in striving for success and it is what lifted James J. Davis from the position of puddler in a steel mill to a seat in the United States Cabinet.

YOUNG MAN STAY NORTH

Some statements recently made by prominent authorities would indicate that the prevailing opinion that the South offers advantages for cotton manufacturing is not founded upon facts. President Robert Amory of the National Cotton Manufacturers association states that while the South has many advantages over New England as a cotton manufacturing centre, most of these he holds are merely temporary. He declares that from a financial standpoint the New England cotton industry shows that over a given period of time New England mill stocks have proved to be a good investment. He points out that the South has to earn from $4 to $6 per spindle to show the same rate of earnings on its capital as the northern mills. If given a fair show in respect to legislation, he says he has no fear for the stability of New England as a cotton manufacturing locality. That is an encouraging statement from a man who knows.

Dr. Donald P. Armstrong, executive of the national health council of New England, before the chamber of commerce in Boston last week, made the plain statement that manufacturers who leave New England to start mills in the South are making a mistake. "In the production of cotton goods," says Dr. Armstrong, "is it better to pay high wages to a group of workers, not more than 2 per cent of whom are ill at any time, or is it better to take a chance with low wages in a malaria and hook-worm ridden southern population with a 10 per cent continuous illness rate and the coincident low production, inefficiency, and time lost?

If the health index is at all a safe guide, the former represent the best investment. The message to the young New England business men today, at least until southern hygienic conditions imporve, might well be, "Young man stay North."

There is sound advice and it applies more particularly to the millmen who seem to think the South is a sort of Utopia. When they build in the South they are anchored there, whereas, if a mill operative goes there to find unhealthy conditions, he can return to New England to escape the hook-worm.

TO STABILIZE THE DOLLAR

Dr. Henry Chandler, economist of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, declares that the immediate strengthening of our monetary policy is a matter of urgent necessity. In support of his argument he claims that not since the world broke away from the gold standard, has the money of the United States had a mooring that could be confidently relied upon to keep its value within a range of fluctuation consistent with sound business. He says that we are in danger of another permanent fall in the value of money unless the business leaders join with the bankers in supporting a policy strictly in accord with sound business development.

What Mr. Chandler means by a fall in the value of money can be illustrated in a practical way by comparing what a ten dollar bill will buy in a grocery store today with what it would purchase some years ago. We find the purchasing power of the dollar declining, or in other words, there is an inflation of the currency. Our money purchases less and as a result wages must increase in order that the working people may be able to live. When this inflation reaches a climax, there may come a turn in the tide and depreciation set in. That would reduce values as reckoned in dollars and cents and would cause more serious alarm. Dr. Chandler points out that to business in general much of the apparent prosperity accompanying a rapidly falling value of money is often little more than a paper prosperity. The large profit and surpluses which are apparently being accumulated often shrink into nothing during the exaggerated reaction that inevitably follows a period of previous activity. He states that much of the extraordinary labor difficulties occurring recently is a direct result of the price dislocations caused by the fall in the value of money. "The course that will contribute most to the prevention of unusual labor difficulties, therefore, is for business men to bend their influence to a conservation of the present value of money." To attain this end, Dr. Chandler favors a new system of maintaining stability in the value of the dollar.

There is no doubt whatever that Dr. Chandler thus issues timely warning against fluctuations of the currency that will cause great business disturbance and dislocation of values to an extent that will result in many failures and more or less paralysis of business. Dr. Chandler refers only to a tendency that is already considered dangerous but the evil effects of which may be averted by the adoption of his timely advice.

The price of anthracite drops to $17 per ton in Lawrence. It is not long since anthracite was being sold for a higher price than that both in Lawrence and Lowell. But when it was put to the test it was found to be unburnable. The price of anthracite in Lowell is $16.50, with most of the dealers, and in the present state of the market, that is not an unreasonable figure for first quality coal; but it is too much for the anthracite that is half slate and stone.

TEACHER COACHES DROPPED

The High School Masters' club has come out in favor of eliminating professional coaches in school athletics and substituting teacher coaches who will be directly responsible to the principals of their schools.

There may be some reason for desiring such a change, possibly in the interests of discipline, but certainly not as a means of improving school athletics. This is an age of specialization, and it would be very difficult to find in the faculty of any particular school a man competent to coach football or baseball teams as efficiently as one who is well trained to the business and who has attained distinction in leading such teams to victory.

We note that the Cambridge school committee has voted to abolish the position of teacher-coach at the Cambridge high and Latin and the Rindge technical schools. Hereafter the position of coach of both schools will be entirely separate from the teacher's duty. Mentors, or coaches, will be chosen by the school committee for each sport. Whether this will be an improvement will depend entirely upon whether the new coaches will be superior to the men who will be dropped. It would seem that if a man is to be employed as teacher, his time will be badly broken up if he has to serve as coach for teams in football, and possibly in other sports. Moreover, it is not improbable that if the coaching of such teams was to be done exclusively by teachers, we might find some very poor sticks in charge of the teams. The man who is known to be a specialist in any given sport is the one who will inspire his team with enthusiasm and courage. The great strides made in school athletics during the past few years would seem to call for coaches who have specialized in the various sports to an extent greater than would be practical for the average teacher.

WAGE SETTLEMENTS

It is gratifying to find that the wage question in the textile industries is likely to be settled through conferences between employers and employed and without any strikes or other disturbances that would interfere with the present prospect of improved business. We have had too many strikes and too many conflicts over wages and working conditions and if the state fails to do its duty in providing machinery which will enable the interested parties to reach equitable decisions on wage disputes, then it is up to the employers and their operatives to settle questions for themselves in their own way. This calls for compromise on both sides and unless the matters at issue be approached in that spirit, there will be continual conflict to the detriment of business in general and serious loss to all concerned.

We can see the effect of such continuous warfare on wage questions in the shoe cities of Haverhill and Lynn. A large number of the shops in those cities do not work more than half time, and the reason is that either the manufacturers do not want to pay fair wages or the unions are not satisfied with the wages the employers can afford to pay. Some of the people in the shoe cities where arbitration contracts are not in force, would be glad to find an opportunity elsewhere that would afford steady employment even at a much lower wage.

BOOM AHEAD

Times are going to be good, for the rest of the year at least, predicts the conservative and able Harvard Economic Service. Its economic "background" is the last word in scientific statistics.

Another wise authority is Benjamin M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National bank of New York. He says the sound and prudent business man "will be very conservative in paying out dividends or in taking profits out of the business. He will seek to conserve profits and to enlarge the surplus as a buffer against future shocks." This is a good lead to follow by the average man in business.

The occupation of the Rhineland by the allied armies since the armistice will cost Germany 1200 million dollars, an amount that would leave a big hole in the reparations assessed against her. That is why Germany holds out and will hold out as long as she can against France in the Ruhr.

It seems a rather strange commentary upon the progress of our girls in domestic science when Francis E. Day, a high school senior, wins prize offered by the state of Massachusetts in a breadmaking contest. How did he do it? Simply by experimenting until he found the way to make the best bread.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Who Mishandled the Coal Strike?

Boston Globe: Those in Washington who have been explaining that the administration is blameless in the situation which developed during the past winter with regard to coal in New York and New England get cold comfort from the retiring Fuel Commissioner of New York state, Gen. George W. Goethals.

Gen. Goethals, who brings the mind of an eminent engineer to bear upon the fuel famine, does not mince matters as to who was to blame. "Imagine Teddy down there on that proposition!" he urges, referring to Washington's policy of watchful psychologizing. "The federal government organized a fuel administration which had no authority." "If you want anything done, you have got to put a man in charge equal to his responsibility." "It is the job of the national government." A commission, he avows, referring to the interstate commerce commission, is a board, and "a board is something that is long, narrow and that never acts." The administration's lack of activity in dealing with the fuel famine Gen. Goethals attributes to "political cowardice." "Congress is to blame for this, and perhaps the man at the top. But, O! for the big stick," is his parting shot.

"God forgive me if I ever take a job like this one again," he exclaims, voicing the wrath of a trained engineering mind after its experience with national politicians. His comment on the mishandling of the fuel crisis will be echoed approvingly wherever folks who were lately shivering stoop to pick the shale from their grates.

The Manila Carnival

Philippine Herald: Today the Manila carnival opens its doors to the public. To celebrate its 11th anniversary, the Philippine Herald issues a special edition devoted exclusively to enterprise, progress, trade, expansion, manufacturing and agricultural development.

We have always considered the Manila carnival as a national institution. The merriment and the revelry that go with it are mere incidents. It is the commercial and industrial fair that is the important feature, and it is this phase that makes of this annual festivity a national institution and a potent power for good.

It is our desire to lay special stress on this particular side of the Manila carnival with the end in view of inviting the attention of the people to the economic development and needs of the Philippine Islands. We are publishing today that special edition in the hope that it will serve the purpose for which it is intended, which is, to bring up the country's economical development into the forefront of our national problems.

A Thought

The objects that we have known in better days are the main props that sustain the weight of our affections, and give us strength to await our future lot.—William Hazlitt.

Loving Identification

"But, madam, you will have to be identified before I can cash this check for you," said the paying teller. "O, I just hate to do it, and George would be dreadfully angry," declared the fair caller, blushing furiously, "but I have a love letter here which describes me fully, if you would care to see it."

Very Clever Trick

Two newsboys were discussing a proposition. "You say you kin git into the picture show?" "Sure kin." "How?" "By sneaking through the exit." "But what if the boss is looking?" "You walks in backwards. Then, if the boss happens to be looking, you're just coming out."

Had Trouble Enough

A delegation had called on Jones to get him to serve on the house committee of the country club. "Gentlemen, I thank you for the honor from the bottom of my heart, but there is nothing doing. I already have a wife, a son-in-law and a second-hand car, and I think that is trouble enough for one man."

Kiss Vs. Bacon

A young married couple engaged a pretty cook. But her cooking was terrible. On the first morning after her arrival the bacon was burned to a cinder. "Darling," said the wife, "I'm afraid cook's burned the bacon. You'll have to be satisfied with a kiss for breakfast. "All right," said the husband, gruffly, "call her in."

Breaking Rule

"This is your dime, sir," said the haughty waitress, "we are not allowed to take tips here." The customer frowned. "I am aware of that fact," he said, "but I thought you would be glad to have me break the rule, since it is in your interest." "Not with a dime," the girl exclaimed. "Breakin' a rule with a dime is only adding insult to injury."

Very Self-Willed

She was a very self-willed little girl and a teacher at her school asked in despair: "Rose, would you mind telling whether you ever do what you're told?" The maid gave the question her serious attention for a moment, and then replied that she was not sure. "But," she added with the cheerful air of one offering an excellent substitutes, "I nearly always do what I want."

Capitol Jokes

U. S. ex-Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen from New Jersey has a favorite story and this is what he says about it: "I have used this story many times as an opening for my addresses when I have been preceded by one of these long-winded introducers. A criminal was about to be hanged for murder. During almost all of the day before and right up to the minute set for the execution, a minister had been trying to get the man to repent. But he was a hard-boiled murderer and wouldn't do it. He even grew impatient. Just as the trap was about to be sprung, he turned to the sheriff and said: 'Sheriff, I wanta thank you. You've been very fair with me.' And to the hangman he said: 'I ain't holdin' no grudge against you, either. You treated me fine and you gotta hang people to make a livin'. But as for you,' and he turned to the minister, 'I'll see you later!'"

A Garden Tragedy

The potato and the pumpkin lived together many years,
Yet I know the way they quarreled has already reached your ears.

While the way that pumpkin ran about was anything but right.

Sometimes he ran all over the pround potato's plot,
There didn't seem to be any place where he was not.

The potato necked and squinted till he turned all into eyes
To see that puffed-up pumpkin grow to such enormous size.

His only consolation was, when after thought, he said;
"If you are so big and yellow you're an empty pumpkin head."

"You're nothing in the world but a small potato row."

MUST REORGANIZE TO SAVE CONCERN

At a meeting of stockholders, creditors and other parties interested in the affairs of the Inter-City Trust corporation, now in litigation, in Boston yesterday, before Judge Morton of the United States court, no definite plans were decided upon for the conduct of the business, although it was announced that the concern must be reorganized or it will lose its extensive real estate holdings in Lowell and other cities.

Two plans were submitted yesterday, the first by W. Edward Utley, which proposed the taking over of all of the property as it is and to plan it on a chain basis and pay all the court expenses up to the present time. The second plan proposed was the purchase of the Blake park mortgage in Brookline and disposing of the other pieces as best they can.

Unless some plan preventing the foreclosure of the present mortgages and which will meet with the approval of Judge Morton is made by Monday next, all of the people who have invested money in the project started by the Inter-City Trust are likely to lose all the money they have put into the plan.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

A few weeks ago the death of Girard P. Dadman, a former city clerk, was published in the local papers and attracted comparatively little attention, although Mr. Dadman for a great many years had been prominent in local politics and had held the office of city clerk under both republican and democratic administrations for nearly a score of years. He was a very efficient city clerk and although a staunch republican always, he was never accused of being unfair to the opposite party. Under the old charter, David Chase held the position of auditor perhaps longer than Mr. Dadman occupied the office of city clerk and there never was a man, at least in those days, more familiar with city finances than was Mr. Chase. Similarly it might be said that Mr. Dadman was quite familiar with everything that came within the sphere of his duties and he was a recognized authority upon all matters connected with the city clerk's office. For a number of years before his death he had been in failing health and most of the republican workers with whom he had been associated had passed away. There was one, however, whose friendship for Mr. Dadman had never waned. That gentleman was Arthur Salmon and it was he who voluntarily took charge of the funeral and communicated with the out-of-town relatives of deceased regarding the burial. Mr. Salmon's friendship for Mr. Dadman showed the loyalty of a true and unflinching friend, one whose good offices were ever active, especially when they were most needed. Such friendship, lasting through the turmoil of the years, through weal and woe, is very rare indeed, and it is one of the things that make life worth living and that nurture sweet memories that never die.

LOCAL CLERGYMAN PRAISES COLIN O'MORE

Relative to Colin O'More's second appearance at the Memorial Auditorium on Thursday night of this week, the following excerpts from a letter received by the manager from Rev. Karl P. Meister of the Centralville M. E. church is of interest at this time:

"The singing of Mr. O'More was human and understandable. His personality was most pleasing. Every moment of the entertainment was one of real pleasure and helpfulness. His rendering of 'My Jesus is Near' and 'Where'er You Walk' has not been surpassed.

"The playing of Emilie Knox was superb. She puts all her personality into the music. I shall not easily forget either of these artists.

"Sincerely yours,
"KARL P. MEISTER."

Mr. Meister heard Colin O'More in Lowell on Feb. 11 and was much impressed and has kindly permitted Mr. Linnehan to publish his letter of congratulation. The above is one of many such complimentary things said of Mr. O'More after his first appearance here.

INGROWN TOE NAIL TURNS OUT ITSELF

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists, however, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.—Adv.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

TO MY LAUNDRY

My collar edges saw my neck
And cut me somewhat jaggedly,
My underwear comes back a wreck,
My sox you launder raggedly:
And though to wear such garments hurts
I'll stand the holes you cut in them,
But kindly do not pin my shirts
And kindly do not button them!

I must remove each pin with care
Before my shirts I don again,
Each one I must unbutton, ere
I ever put it on again;
Oh, starch my garments till it hurts
And pains me to be shut in them,
But kindly do not pin my shirts
And kindly do not button them!

Fold them as often as you will
And doll them up expensively;
It's useless, but I'll pay the bill
Nor murmur too extensively.
It is, perhaps, my just deserts
That I feel like t mutt in them,
But please, oh, please don't pin my shirts,
And please, oh, please don't button them.

C. Y. M. L. WILL HOLD SPECIAL MEETING

A special meeting of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will be held in the Lyceum rooms, Suffolk street, next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of considering a change in the constitution as it exists at the present time. According to the tenets of the laws now in vogue, the board of directors consists of eight members elected by popular vote and seven appointed by the spiritual director. By the substitution of the proposed change, the board of directors will still consist of 15 members, but the seven appointees by the spiritual director will be done away with and the same number elected by popular vote, making the entire membership of the board a duly elected body. If the plan goes through, and it is generally believed that it will, the directors will then have the authority to elect a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and an advisory board of three.

It is expected that a large number of old and new members will be present at Sunday's meeting to voice their opinion on the proposed change, which is regarded as the best and most democratic constitution possible.

BOY INSTANTLY KILLED BY AUTO

MARBLEHEAD, April 3.—Philip Obeo, 8, who boarded at 22 Curtis street, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon while playing on Pleasant street, when struck by an auto owned and operated by Edward Pileau of 15 Green street. Witnesses say that the child ran in front of the car.

Philip was the son of Frank F. Obeo of 40 Rockview avenue, Jamaica Plain.

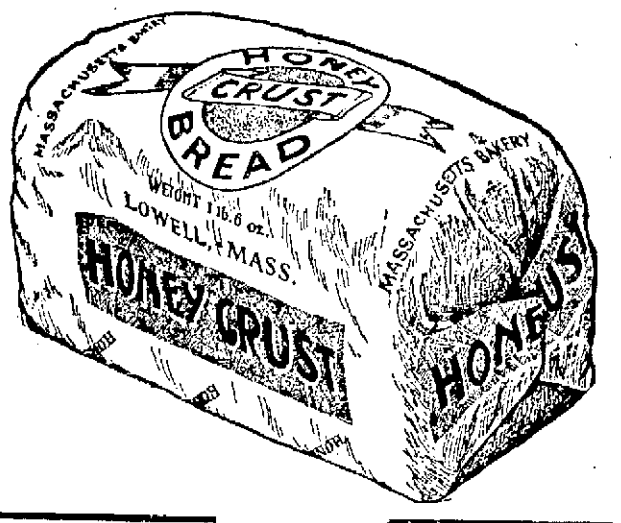

Pileau picked the lad up and took him to Dr. P. L. Sanborn's office nearby, where he was pronounced dead. Medical Examiner Frank Atwood of Salem viewed the body and found death due to a fractured skull.

The police arrested Pileau and released him in $500 bail. An inquest will be held April 17.

LOCK JEWELER IN CLOSET, TAKE $8000 IN GEMS

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 3.—Hugo Riddell of Providence, proprietor of the Pawtucket Jewelry exchange here, was locked in a closet at his place of business late yesterday, by two young men, who selected jewelry valued at $8000 and left.

"What do you value your life at?" one of the men asked Riddell, presenting a pistol. Then the two forced him into the closet. He was released some minutes later when his cries were heard by a patient leaving the office of a dentist next door.

The robbers made their selection of diamonds, rings and watches in a few seconds. Riddell said that a young woman who visited the place Saturday and again yesterday had given them accurate information.

NEW SYSTEM ON CRIMINAL CASES

BOSTON, April 3.—A new system in regard to the trial of criminal cases went into effect yesterday, at the Middlesex criminal court at East Cambridge.

District Attorney Arthur K. Reading issued a statement in which he said "that it has always been the rule that criminal cases should take precedence over civil cases. That rule has not been lived up to, and in the past, lawyers have been granted continuances of criminal cases on the grounds that they are engaged in a civil matter. That will no longer be accepted as an excuse for the continuance of a criminal case.

"The district attorney said "that in the future, instead of allowing continuances on criminal cases which have been marked for trial, the principals in these cases will be defaulted unless they are in court when their cases are called."

Yesterday morning, out of 21 cases called, 15 principals and 11 sureties were recorded as defaulted. Of these three are Lowell liquor cases.

MOVE TO HAVE ALL EGGS STAMPED

LONDON, April 3.—Every egg sold in England will be stamped with the country of origin if the plans of various housewives' organizations to put such a bill through parliament are successful.

Much interest has been aroused in London recently by the declaration of the national poultry council that only about ten per cent of the eggs sold as new laid eggs come from the provinces of England. It has been shown that huge quantities of eggs are shipped into England every year from Holland, China and Egypt, are mixed with other eggs, and sold as native eggs. Because the foreign eggs are of a better color and larger than English eggs, it is said the retailers are able to sell them more readily than English eggs.

RECORD IN BUILDING

PORTLAND, Me., April 3.—Building operations in this city during the year ending Mar. 31, costing $3,264,404, and the number of permits, 1149, were greater than in any year since the building inspector's office was established, Inspector Charles A. Hanson reported yesterday.

Not a new brick dwelling was erected, but 234 were built of wood. Garages led all other classes, with 259 of wood.

RAW MATERIALS LEAD IN IMPORTS

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Nearly half of the imports of the United States during December consisted of raw materials for manufacture and nearly 20 per cent were partly manufactured products intended for finishing in American factories.

The analysis of the month's imports, which had a total value of $293,464,000 as announced yesterday, made the following comparisons:

Raw materials for manufacturing $124,019,000 or 42 per cent against $93,979,000 in December, 1921; raw foodstuffs, $31,228,000 against $32,866,000; foods ready for consumption $26,539,000, against $25,472,000; partly manufactured products $57,194,000, against $32,082,000; finished manufactures $52,655,000, against $51,331,000; miscellaneous $1,767,000, against $1,775,000.

Definite plans for this work were decided upon at a meeting of the club at 295 Market street last night at which the president, Constantine S. Dukakis, presided. John Constantinou, formerly professor at the American College at Smyrna and now a resident of Boston and Dr. John Gatsopoulos of Lowell, both spoke on the necessity of aid for the stricken people of Asia Minor.

PENNANT TO BE PRESENTED

Presentation to Take Place at Lowell-All-Star Game This Evening

The 1922-1923 pennant won by Lowell in competition with Worcester in the series which terminated a week ago tonight, will be formally presented to the champions at the Crescent rink tonight, when the first game of a series between the title winners and Bill Duggan's All-Stars will be played.

Mayor Donovan has been invited to attend tonight's game and formally hand over the emblem to Capt. Harkins and his crew and the presentation is bound to prove a most pleasing incident for local polo fans.

A large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the presentation. A delegation from Woburn, home of Capt. Harkins, will come over the road to participate in the event, and needless to say they will come armed with horns, bells, etc., to accord recognition to their townsman. The Woburn fans are elated over Harkins' success in landing his third pennant for Lowell and all season long many from that city have come to Lowell regularly to witness the games.

The coming competition is expected to be one of the greatest treats in polo history, arranged as a climax to a most successful local season. Duggan has surrounded himself with a great combination, one of the best possible to obtain.

Like other all-star outfits this one will not only possess individual luminaries, but will have three men who have played together virtually all season, and this fact will greatly increase the team's effectiveness. Duggan Dufresne and Gardner, all of the New Bedford team, a trio understanding each other perfectly, a combination that knows how to get the best results with the minimum of effort is the nucleus of the team. Added to these are Steve Pierce, star second rush of the Worcester team and one of the best in this position in the business, and Bill Blount the classy goal tender of the Providence team.

Lowell will depend on the line-up that was good enough to bring the championship to the city. Kid Williams and Bob Hart will be on the rush line, Ferdie Harkins at center, "Molly" Morrison at halfback and Bill Jette, goal.

In addition to the interest in the games themselves there is going to be added interest in the Duggan-Williams feud. In the recent New Bedford-Lowell series a contest between these two stars to determine the champion rusher and goal scorer resulted in Williams carrying off the honors, 7s to 47. Dugan was dissatisfied with the result, and he promises to turn the tables on the Lowell flash in the coming battles. He has requested that the scorer to be posted at the center to score the races to the spot and his request will be granted.

CLEVELAND DEPENDS ON WORK OF RECRUITS

By N. E. A. Service

LAKELAND, Fla., April 3.—George Metevier and "Ossie" Boone are the two recruit pitchers Speaker is banking on to come through for him.

Both pitchers received a brief trial with the Indians last year, and showed enough to warrant the belief they would come through.

Metevier and Boone are right handers, Boone coming from Chattanooga in the Southern Association and Metevier from Jersey City in the International league.

Boone is the tallest man on the Cleveland staff. His most effective ball is his fast one, which takes a peculiar dip, much after the manner of Ernie Shorg's fast ball when he starred with the Boston Americans.

Few pitchers boast such a ball. It is a delivery peculiar to tall pitchers who use a side-arm motion. Such a style gets a dip on the fast ball.

The success of Pillette of the Detroit club, who was the sensation of the American league last season was due to such a style fast ball.

Shore, Boone and Pillette are fellows who go close to 6 feet 3 inches in height.

Metevier has a nice change of pace, a good curve and a fair fast ball. He also knows how to pitch.

COLD WEATHER HOLDS UP SCHOOL BASEBALL

Continued cold weather has made its presence known at the high school by making it impossible for candidates for the baseball team to get out-of-doors practice. Up to the present time only battery candidates have been given a work-out, and they cannot get the practice they need indoors as the light is not adequate for speed pitching. Coach Liston plans to call out candidates for other positions on the first warm day and expects over 100 boys to answer his call. The first scheduled game is to be played on April 19. Just as soon as he gets his baseball team going, Coach Liston will call out candidates for the football squad for spring training.

Physical Director Donald MacIntyre is also being kept back in his plans for a freshman baseball league by the cold weather. Faculty Manager Conway is making up a schedule for the freshman team but this will not be ready for a week or more.

No further action has been taken towards forming a golf team among high school students but this will also take definite form soon.

Frank T. Anderson of Brooklyn, 1917-18 champion, one of the seeded six, was to play the two singles matches scheduled today, the first, a second round contest with Jack J. Linderman. The winner will meet Frederick Dannun.

RED SOX INFIELD NOT YET SETTLED

Boston Team Leaves Hot Springs for Little Rock—Glad to Get Away

BOSTON, April 3.—The Red Sox will leave their Hot Springs (Ark.) training camp today for Little Rock, where their exhibition tour will open this afternoon with the Little Rock club. Manager Frank Chance and his men expressed few regrets in parting with the scene of their early season workout.

The Red Sox infield is not settled yet, reports from Hot Springs say, because constant bad weather and a poor playing field gave little opportunity for testing the players' ability. Chance said his men were in good condition and would probably work with more spirit in other surroundings.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., the Braves idled yesterday owing to a storm. It was the first day in two training seasons at St. Petersburg that the club had lost a day because of rain. The Braves will meet Cleveland today in the second and last game of the spring series between the clubs. The Indians won the first on Saturday in Lakeland.

Cubs Have Game Stale

CHICAGO, April 3.—Not a single day's practice was lost by the Chicago Nationals during their stay on the California coast, making them the most fortunate and at the same time the most unfortunate team in the league. The fact is, it was reported here the Cubs have had so much practice without rest that they have gone stale. That was given as the reason for the loss of a half dozen games at San Francisco and Oakland last week. The Cubs on route back east, play at El Paso today.

Signs Life Contract

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—Ray Schmandt, infielder for the Brooklyn Nationals and Miss Estelle Overmann, were married here yesterday. Schmandt resides in St. Louis.

Hasty to Take Bride

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—Kellar Hasty, pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, tomorrow will marry Miss Wilma Elizabeth Butler of Marietta, Ga., says an announcement from there. Hasty arrived here with his club yesterday to play an exhibition game with the Cincinnati Reds.

Indians to Play Braves

CLEVELAND, Ohio April 3.—For the first time this season the Cleveland Indians were forced to remain idle because of rain. A game scheduled yesterday between the Indians and Lakeland, of Florida State league, was postponed until tomorrow.

The Indians go to St. Petersburg today to meet the Boston Braves in the last game scheduled with National League clubs.

Yankees Rout Robins

NEW YORK, April 3.—The Yankees climbed into the winning column in their exhibition series with the Brooklyn Robins capturing the game at Meridian, Miss., yesterday, 13 to 9.

The American champions were in hitting form, gathering 16 safeties. Three of them were from Babe Ruth's bat. The big fellow had a triple, a double and a single to his credit.

Pirates Off For Tulsa

PITTSBURGH April 3.—The majority of the players of the Pittsburgh National League club, will leave Hot Springs, Ark., tonight for Tulsa, Okla., where they will meet the Western league team of that place in games Wednesday and Thursday. A small squad of recruits will be left at Hot Springs for further training. From Tulsa, the Pirates will go on a barnstorming tour.

In yesterday's final intra-club game, which the Regulars won, 12 to 3, Russell and Carey knocked home runs and Leavitt, former Brown university star, got two triples.

PRO STARS TOUT JOHNNY FARRELL

Keep your eye on Johnny Farrell. That is the word that is being passed around by the crack golfers of the country.

There are many who believe the 21-year-old youngster, who is the pro at the Quaker Ridge club in New York will surely displace Gene Sarazen as the golfing sensation.

In 25 matches with the leading professionals of the country, Sarazen and Hutchison were only defeated five times on their recent tour. This gives some idea of the opposition Barnes and Farrell presented. In one of the matches the winners were eight up.

"Farrell is the most brilliant young golfer in the country. He has a chance of being a much talked about young man at the end of the summer's play."

WILL WHIP TEAM INTO SHAPE

Coach James Liston of the high school baseball team expects to call out his team on Thursday of this week, if the weather continues warm. Spaulding Park is still heavily laden with ice in shaded sections and he will have to use either Cobb Park or the South common. Unless the squad is called out this week, Coach Liston will have but little opportunity to pick either a batting or a batting team. The schedule calls for an opening game on April 19 and that is but two weeks away.

Coach Arthur Lynch of the freshman ball players intends to take his men up to the South common tomorrow if the weather permits. The schedule for the freshmen team is not yet made up but he wants to have a good team formed at about the same time the varsity team takes the field.

Can Battering Ruth Come Back?

By BILLY EVANS

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 3.—Can Babe Ruth come back?

At present the demon swatter is the question mark of baseball.

What are the chances of Ruth to regain the home-run crown that is now the property of Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals?

For several days I have been giving the "Sultan of Swat" the once over, the up and down, trying to decide that very question.

If the hitting of home runs merely depends upon condition, Ruth has a great chance to win back the fame and glory that was his for three years.

I had heard much about Ruth's condition prior to hitting this burg, but was skeptical as to the reports.

Ruth Weighs 201 Pounds

How much had Ruth actually lost during the winter on the farm and the preliminary work at Hot Springs, Ark? I wanted to get the information first-hand and had the big fellow step on the scales. He tipped the beam at exactly 201 pounds.

Last season Ruth weighed 235 pounds. Draw on your imagination and it is an easy matter to picture the change that has taken place. The waistline has been reduced at least six inches, and the bay-window that once announced the approach of the Babe is now conspicuously missing.

Ruth is lighter and in better shape today than I have ever seen him during his entire connection with the American league. When he was the leading southpaw of the Johnsonian organization, Ruth weighed in the neighborhood of 210.

Ruth is in fine shape. He is working hard to keep his condition. Ruth is more than anxious to win back the exalted position he once held in the eyes of fandom. He feels keenly his failure of last season.

As to Ruth's condition I am perfectly satisfied the big fellow never was in better shape.

As to his ability to come back, well, that is another question.

I am of the opinion that Ruth's comeback depends on something more than mere condition. Psychology is going to play an even greater part.

If Ruth gets away to a good start, it will mean everything to him in an effort to win back popular favor.

Must Regain Confidence

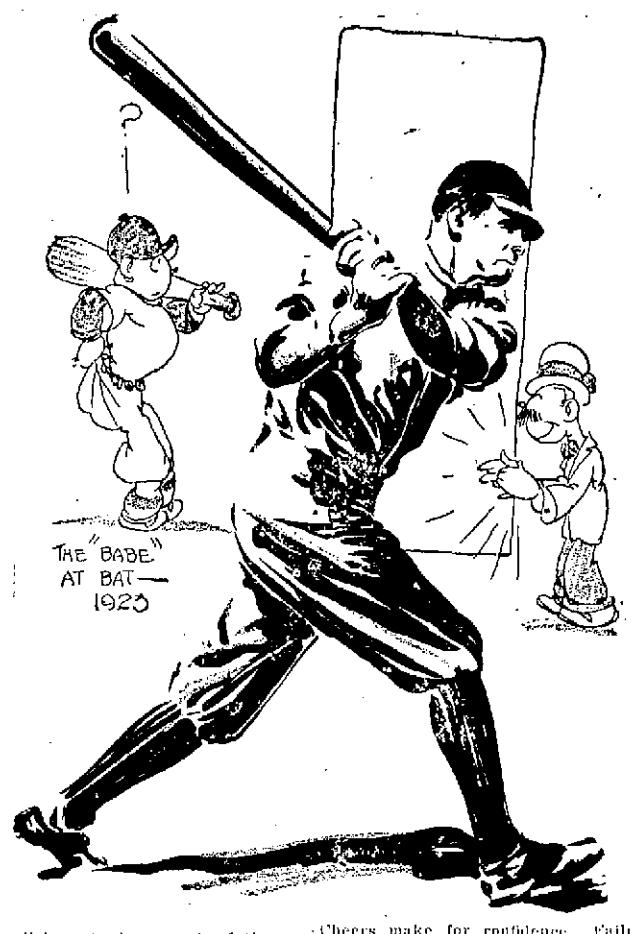

Mob psychology is going to enter into the affair to a great extent. In a sense, Ruth has lost confidence in himself. Once that was his greatest asset.

Ruth, when he was breaking home-run records, feared no pitcher, they all looked alike to him. Every pitcher had a wholesome respect for Ruth. He was the big threat.

That condition has been changed. Ruth's failure of last year has caused the pitchers to lose much of the respect they once had for Babe's batting prowess. Ruth looks no different than the other good hitters. No longer is he looked on as a super-batsman. That makes a difference.

Ruth is well aware that fandom is fickle. A good start means he will win back the cheers instead of jeers. Cheers make for confidence. Failure to hit at the start will unquestionably discourage the big fellow and probably kill off some of his worthwhile resolutions.

Ruth has won back condition. Now if he can get the fans with him, American league pitchers may once more tremble when he steps into the batter's box.

DETROIT CASTOFFS STAR AFTER JOINING REDS

Jim Roberts, a big, husky pitcher, who is trying for a berth on the Cincinnati staff, has a fine chance to come through if precedent means anything.

The precedent is that Jim Roberts for a couple of months was a member of the Detroit team and was sent back to the minors without any strings on him.

Detroit castoffs have been unusually successful with the Cincinnati club.

Babe Pinelli, who failed to impress Detroit as a third sacker, and was sent back to the coast, got his third big league trial with theReds, and now is rated one of the best players in the National league at that position.

Johnny Couch, who had a big year in 1922, and who by his great work kept the Reds in the race during the early part of the season, had his first big league opportunity with Detroit and was sent back.

George Harper, who, the Reds say, is one of the best hitters in the National league, was carried for a couple of seasons by Jennings when he was in charge of Detroit, but finally turned loose as lacking big league class.

Cobb, when he played in the Winter Coast league, was favorably impressed by Caveney, who starred at short for the Reds last year. He offered a fancy price for him but finally decided Caveney wasn't worth the money asked and quit bidding in favor of the Reds. Ball players, always superstitious, are inclined to feel that Roberts' failure to make good at Detroit means that he will surely deliver for Cincinnati.

FOR NORTH AND SOUTH AMATEUR TOURNEY

PINEHURST, N. C., April 3. The 16 golfers who are to participate in the championship round in the annual North & South amateur tournament will be known tonight at the conclusion of the second day of the qualifying round which began yesterday.

Unless he shows an amazing reversal of form, Henry J. Topping of Greenwich, the 1922 champion, will not get an opportunity to defend his laurels. He was 40th on the list last night with an 88. Since there were numerous others with 86s, 87s and 88s, Topping may be able to get into the charmed 16.

The field of 250 contestants went to the tees today with T. Russell Brown of Lake Champlain leading with a total of 76, four under his nearest competitors, Harold V. Garrity of Asbury Park, and W. C. Hunt of Houston, who were tied with 80.

LOWELL MAN'S CLAIM IS DISMISSED

(Special to The Sun)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, April 3.—The industrial accident board has decided in the case of Frederick H. Gunther who claimed compensation after the board had discontinued his payments last January that he was not entitled to further remuneration because he has fully recovered from an injury he received June 2, 1921.

At the hearing Gunther, who lives in Lowell, testified that he fractured his right leg June 2, 1921, while working as a repair man for the Pitts Motor Sales company. He was paid total compensation until he returned to work in November, 1922, he said and partial compensation up to Jan. 25, 1923, when payments were discontinued by order of a board member.

At the present time he is employed doing clerical work at the Union National bank, he said. He receives $12 a week in this capacity, he testified, and at the time of his injury he was receiving $18 a week. He has not tried to do repair work since the accident, he said, but he knows he could not do it because of the condition of his leg.

In an impartial report, Dr. Charles L. Scudder said: "I have examined Gunther carefully. I have a report of the X-ray taken by Dr. A. W. Gerrke of 43 Bay State road.

"In view of the man's age, a young man, in view of the multiplicity of minor complaints as following the accident I am inclined to believe that this man is able to do work and is not suffering from any permanent disability dependent upon the accident. The only thing that is hard to decide is whether his statement that the injured leg is weaker than before the injury is correct or not. I am inclined to believe that it is true. It is hard to prove one way or the other. He has not tried at any time to do his old work. There is a tendency for this man to overemphasize his symptoms."

Commissioner Joseph A. Parks dismissed the claim. HOYT.

MR. MASON WILL TALK ON FOLK MUSIC

Dance forms and folk music will be the subject of the lecture to be given in the music hall of the Lowell high school, Kirk street, on Thursday evening, April 5, at 7.30 o'clock by Stuart Mason, well known composer and member of the faculty of the New England conservatory. This lecture is the third of a series of lectures of music appreciation, which the division of university extension, Massachusetts department of education, is offering in Lowell.

The course is intended to develop a more intelligent appreciation of music by teaching the essentials of listening. Special emphasis will be given to the distinguishing characteristics of musical masterpieces. No technical knowledge of music is necessary.

Mr. Mason has recently received from the French government the decoration of "Palmes Academiques" in recognition of his attainments as composer, and as interpreter of old and modern French music. Several of his compositions have been produced by musical organizations.

The other lectures of the course will be given on the following subjects: The Rondo, Sonata and Symphony; the Opera and Oratoria; Studies of Great Composers: Bach, Handel, Beethoven; The Romantic school; Modern Music.

All persons interested are invited to attend this lecture at the Lowell high school on Thursday evening, April 5 at 7.30 o'clock. Only the usual small fee will be charged for enrollment.

Here's $75,000 Player in His New Giant Uniform

Jimmy O'Connell, San Francisco outfielder, who cost the New York Giants $75,000, talking with "Dutch" Reuther, Brooklyn pitching star and also a Pacific coast product, at the Giants training camp.

By NEA Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 21.—High-priced rookie phenoms usually have pretty tough sledding when they report to their owners—but Jimmy O'Connell, who cost John McGraw $75,000, skipped in easily.

In his first batting practice here he cracked a fair ball over the fence. He showed class in his fielding, too, and has McGraw and his coaches declaring that the coast leaguer is the find of the decade.

Incidentally, Jimmy's modest manner has made a hit with the rest of the Giant regulars, and they have elected him a "regular guy."

In his first exhibition game he got four hits and a walk in five times at bat.

BEAUTY CONTEST AT ASSOCIATE HALL

Associate hall last night was the scene of a model and beauty contest conducted by Francis J. Rouse, manager of the hall, and Lowell's beauty turned out in large numbers to take part in the contest and to compete for the numerous prizes offered.

Manager Rouse chose five men as judges from the gathering and they in turn chose 20 girls as the leading contestants from the throng. At intermission these girls were lined up on the stage numbered with large numbers, and the spectators voted for their choice of ten. The first prize, a necklace of La Tausca pearls, was awarded to Miss Nora Cummings. Nine other prizes of the same nature were awarded to Miss Alice Corkery, Katherine Lamb, Helen O'Malley, Blanche Jubinville Katherine Hanley, Katherine Dowd, Victoria Taylor, Nellie Grant and Helen Tarella. The other ten who had been chosen by the judges as among the first 20 were as follows: Juliet Harmon, Irene Benjamin, Viola Wells, Helen McGee, Mary McLarnen, Lillian Novak, Rose Corcoran, Lillian Thurston, Eva Pelletier and Ada Walt. The judges were as follows: Leon Rohan, William L. Paul Michael Malloy, Bernard Gilho and William Maddon.

COMING FROM NEW YORK

Word comes from New York that Joe Fox, the featherweight champion of Great Britain, who is to meet Lew Paluso in the feature event of the Moody club card on Thursday night, has a very strong following of English admirers in New York, a number of whom will make the trip to Lowell to see him box.

Fox, who came to this country wearing the Lord Lonsdale championship belt, has made a fine impression on this side of the pond, and among the notables he has boxed are Johnny Kilbane, Joe Lynch, Joe Tiplitz, Kramkie Burns, Benny Valger, Eugene Criqui, and others of class and prominence.

Paluso needs no recommendation as his work here against Newport Johnny Brown created a sensation, and wherever boxing fans meet they discuss his brilliant endeavor. Truly Paluso made a great impression here, and his spectacular work found many proclaiming him a future champion. He certainly appeared to have everything in his battle with Brown. It will be interesting to see him against a man who is reputed to be equally as clever.

Two semi-finals are carded: Jack O'Brien of Lawrence vs. Lefty Williams of Lowell, Robert E. Lee of Boston vs. Jim Rocco of Roston. In a preliminary Johnny Mack and Eddie Purtell will be opponents.

BASKETBALL TOURNEY

CHICAGO, April 3.—Teams from the Atlantic seaboard and the far northwest will open the national interscholastic basketball tourney at the University of Chicago today.

Twenty teams of the 40 of the country's best entered in the tournament will play today. The tournament brings together 29 state champions and 11 runners up and 400 players, coaches, teachers and officials, representing 31 states.

In a clash tonight between Catonsville Washn., High and Fitchburg, Mass., High, the relative merits of eastern and western methods of the game were expected to be brought out. The former team is from a town of 500 and has won 32 straight games, while Fitchburg is holder of the state title and champion of middle New England and is regarded as possibly the strongest eastern entry.

ONE ROOKIE PITCHER LOOKS GOOD TO RICKEY

From a pitching standpoint, the spring training trip of the Cardinals at Bradentown, Fla., seems destined to prove a failure, as far as the recruits are concerned.

Of the many pitchers taken south only one has shown enough stuff to impress Manager Rickey that he is up to the major league standard. That pitcher is Fred Wigington, a big right hander from the Nebraska State league.

Eddie Dyer, a left hander from Rice Institute, Texas, is promising, but Rickey intends to make an outfielder of him, so as to utilize his speed and batting ability.

All of which makes it seem that the pitching burden will be entirely up to the veterans.

Rickey's list of veterans include Pfeffer, Sherdell, Toney, Haines, Doak, North Pertica and Barfoot.

Rickey feels that Pfeffer and Sherdell will deliver, and is hopeful of getting much aid from Toney, Haines and Doak.

STASIAK FAILS TO TOSS SILVA

Handicap Match Witnessed by Large and Enthusiastic Crowd

Rarely has such enthusiasm attenedd a wrestling bout in this city as that which prevailed at the Crescent rink last night when Stanley Stasiak, the Polish Hercules, attempted to throw both John Romano and Justanla Silva within 75 minutes. Stasiak failed to accomplish the task and therefore lost the match, with Silva the last of the two men to go against him being declared the winner.

Stasiak threw Romano in 28 minutes and 35 seconds, but he failed to negotiate a fall on Silva in the remaining 47 minutes. As this pair grappled furiously, one to score a fall and the other to prevent his shoulders being pinned to the mat, the crowd, the largest of the season, was in an uproar. When finally Silva was declared the winner, a great demonstration followed.

Romano, was the first to enter the ring for the big bout. He is a well built fellow, weighing in the vicinity of 200. He works with considerable speed and the way he extricated himself from apparently impossible holds stamped him a wrestler of merit. Stasiak, however, proved the stronger of the two and he displayed dazzling speed for a man of his weight. The pair went at it in vigorous fashion, and applied many great holds, only to have them broken in quick order. Finally after 28 minutes of strenuous work Stasiak lifted Romano off the floor and swung him through the air several times. Then he dropped him to the mat and pounced upon him, the fall coming as a result of a combination flying dervish and inside crotch hold.

After a rest of ten minutes, Stasiak returned to the ring to take on Silva. This was the part of the bout that the fans were anxiously awaiting. It was a bitter struggle against a pair of giants. Stasiak started right after Silva with great vigor. He grabbed his heavier opponent and tried hard to apply a head hold, but the Portuguese champion always managed to wiggle out. Silva appeared content to stay on the defensive, allowing Stasiak to tire himself. But when caught in a dangerous position, Silva put his great strength and bulk to work with the desired result. For half an hour the giants tugged away, first one being on top and then the other, with the supporters of both cheering wildly for their favorite. In the last ten minutes of the allotted time Stasiak worked furiously in an attempt to win. He resorted to every maneuver known to the game. Finally he had Silva down, with one shoulder to the mat, but despite a herculean effort he could not bring the other one to the canvas. The pair were in this position when the 75 minutes expired and Referee Burbank, who by the way makes an ideal official, declared Silva the winner.

In the opening bout Paul Bowser and Charlie Marshall met in a one fall match to a finish. The pair went to it with great vim and for more than half an hour they engaged in a fast and skillful battle. After 56 minutes and 11 seconds of whirlwind endeavor Bowser negotiated a fall as a result of a flying mare.

The bouts were staged under the auspices of the Polish Falcons, Henry Golec in charge, and they proved successful in every way. The Falcons are to conduct more bout, the object of which is to increase their building fund. Mr. Golec announced that next week George Kotsonaros, the Greek champion, would meet Justinia Silva in a match to a finish. On the same program Stanley Stasiak will fight it out with Lawson Pilham, the Attleboro giant, to a finish. The preliminary will have as principals Luke Chak of Lowell and Charlie Marshall.

BASKETBALL GAME TOMORROW NIGHT

The city championship basketball series between the Y. M. C. I. and Broadways will be resumed at the Crescent rink tomorrow night, when the fifth game of the classic will be played. Since the last game, a week ago, both teams have engaged in a number of practice sessions and both outfits are on edge for the battle. Arthur Ryan of Nashua will referee and the game will start at 8.15. A preliminary game will be played at 7.30.

OPERA BY RADIO HALTED

Broadcasting Held Up When Navy Yard Picked Up S. O. S. Calls for Steamer

BOSTON, April 3.—Radio fans listening to the broadcasting of "Die Meistersingers," from the Boston Opera House, lost 10 minutes of the opera about 8 last evening, when the Charlestown Navy Yard ordered all broadcasting stopped. The Navy Yard had picked up faint S.O.S. calls, and the concert broadcasting interfered with the signals.

It developed that the calls for assistance were from the steamer City of Victoria, which was afire off the Azores, according to messages picked up at the Navy Yard. After ten minutes permission was given for resumption of the opera broadcasting. The singers at the Opera House kept on singing in the meantime, of course, so the fans lost the music while the radio was under the ban. The broadcasting was done by Station WNAC, Shepard Stores, direct from the Opera House, starting at 7.15.

AMERICA'S GREATEST BARITONE COMING

The average young singer starting on his or her career has one dream beyond all other dreams, that of being included in the roster of singers of the Metropolitan Opera House. Some live to see the dream realized but only a very few. Reinald Werrenrath, distinguished baritone, who is to appear here April 10 under the management of the Lowell Choral society never gave the Metropolitan in particular nor opera in general more than a passing thought up to the day when out of the clear sky came an invitation from Gatti-Casazza to join the company. It was absolutely without precedent. Here was a young singer who had made an admirable reputation for himself, but he had never been on the stage, knew no operatic roles and had never shown any particular interest in them.

Of course, Werrenrath accepted. Who would not, but he did not do so with the idea that opera would henceforth make his career. As he said at the time: "Fascinating though operatic work is, it could never possibly be unifying enough to woo me from concert work. It is a real joy to have a new idea to work on, a new point of view to base one's studies on, but apart from that I feel that my life work lies in the concert field and I could never desert it, come what may."

Werrenrath's debut, which he made without any rehearsal whatever, was a success, and his performance of Valentine in "Faust," which came later, was a sensation, but for all that he was never truly interested in the work. His loss to the operatic stage is a serious one, for he had all the qualities which go to make a great dramatic artist. But in the end he can give pleasure to an infinitely larger number of people by singing in concert than he could in the very restricted field of the Metropolitan.

WOMAN LOCATED BY WIRELESS

Inquiries recently broadcasted from the Amrad wireless station at Medford Hillside at the request of Trull & Wier of this city, who have been trying to locate a missing woman, Miss Grace E. Bicknell, missing for 20 years, has resulted in locating a woman of that name in Elizabeth, N. J. Today a member of the local law firm started for New Jersey to investigate the claim of the sender of the reply to the widespread radio call for information as to the woman's whereabouts.

If the woman is the one whose address is desired, she will be informed of legal procedures involving several valuable North Carolina properties now in the hands of administrative authorities for distribution to lawful heirs.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

"Adam's Rib," a Cecil B. DeMille production, is the main attraction at the Merrimack Square theatre the first part of this week and it is taking the crowds who attend by storm. It is a feature picture and the scenery includes the hustling wheat pit of the Chicago board of trade, the ballroom of a millionaire's home, and massive forest scenes, depicting the life of the cavemen, untold years ago. The cast is what is known as all-star, Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Elliott Dexter, Theodor Kosloff and Pauline Garon taking the leading parts in this production.

The story revolves around Michael Ramsay, a Chicago broker, his wife and daughter, Tillie, a 17-year-old flapper. Mrs. Ramsay is left to her own resources for amusement, due to the fact that her husband has but one thought—money. She meets M. Jaromie, deposed king of a small Balkan state, and becomes infatuated with him. On the occasion of the Ramsay's 13th anniversary, Michael Ramsay returns home to find his wife in the stranger's arms. He figures that the only way to keep his wife is to have the king put back on his throne and he immediately takes steps to do so.

Tillie has fallen in love with a professor of anthropology and has also seen and understood her mother's actions. In endeavoring to keep her mother out of trouble, she gets "in dutch" with him. She later goes to the museum to explain her actions and basis her story on a picture of cave life. In this story a flash-back is shown of many scenes coincident with life among the cavemen and primeval love.

A timely picture that is also being shown is one of the work and experiences of Sarah Bernhardt during the past World war. Another picture being shown is "The Leather Pushers," a story of the champion boxer of the world.

"Mud and Sand," a comedy, featuring, "Rhubarb Vaseline," as a satire on matadors and others who make their living in the bull fighting rings of Spain. The International News Weekly and "Fun From the Press" completes an exceptionally good bill.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

This is National Vaudeville Artists' week all over this land and patrons and lovers of this highly varied type of entertainment have an opportunity to help a most worthy cause which concerns itself principally with providing comfort and necessaries of life for members of the profession in less fortunate circumstances than others.

In connection with the observance there is a bill at the Lowell Keith house this week of more than ordinary interest and worth, in fact, it is one of the best vaudeville salads served to local theatregoers this season. Standing out pre-eminently are Lloyd Ibach's entertainers, seven young men born with a jazz song in their hearts and played now for the edification and enjoyment of Keith audiences on banjos, saxophones, violins, drums and piano. No such jazz symphony has been heard on a local theatre stage this year and last evening's audience greeted it with sustained applause. The boys in the act include Lloyd Ibach, Allen Quirk, Parry Aiken, Jimmie Nault, Eddie Heffner, Henry Hammond and Charles Keller, the last named being violinist and leader.

Remember Harry Norwood and Alpha Hall in "It May Have Happened to You?" They have played Lowell before, yes, more than once, and their humor has not lost any of its individuality through recurring performances. It's big time stuff, drawled out inimitably and with excellent effect.

Billy Zeck and Gladys Randolph offer a comedy skit, "Grooming the Groom," that is good enough to take headline position on most any program. Getting the bridegroom ready for his fourth venture upon the matrimonial ocean is the reason for the act, but it branches out along other lines and presents Miss Randolph in several catchy song numbers.

York and Maybelle are rapid workers along accepted comedy lines and the Melroy sisters dance exceedingly well together. Ed and Ida Tindell open the show with an aerial act and the program is brought to a whizbang close by the Three Whirlwinds, sensational acrobats on roller skates.

The picture features include "Frivolous Fiji," Topics of the Day and an Aesop Fable.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

"The Bird of Paradise," Richard Watson Tully's captivating romance of Hawaii, is the attraction at the Lowell Opera House this week. For the past two weeks the entire staff of the local theatre has been hard at work to make the production as wonderful as when Lenore Ulric created the role of Luana in New York. The story of the sacrificing love of the Hawaiian princess, who finally plunges into the crater of a volcano, has now toured the country for about ten years with always the same result. Audiences are enthralled by it wherever it is shown. The Luttringer players are assisted by the original Hawaiian quintet, who do much to reproduce accurately the romance and the beauty of the beach at Waiakiki where much of the action takes place. The scenic staff has fairly outdone itself in the attempt to reproduce with vivid realism the magic beauty of the Pacific isles. Mary Anne Dentler plays the part of the Hawaiian princess, who sacrifices everything for love, and Arthur de Lord plays the part of the beachcomber, who is regenerated to real manhood by the love of a good woman. Richard Morgan, whose artistry has made him a popular favorite with the patrons of the local house, has the well known part of Dr. Wilson, whose full is sudden and final, once he is gripped by the fatal spell of the South Sea islands where beauty and languorousness are synonomous. The Hawaiians are headed by the world renowned Moke Kaiawe, who led his troupe in a number of native songs and dances, that all lovers of music and especially of Hawaiian music are sure to appreciate. These travelers from the far distant Pacific are the best of their kind being skilled musicians and splendid types of a race that is fast nearing extinction. Despite the large advance sale of tickets, "The Bird of Paradise" will run for one week only at the local theatre because of the fact that the Hawaiian troupe are booked in advance for theatres all over the country.

THE STRAND THEATRE

A picture of unusual local interest, "The Voice From the Minaret," is being shown as a headliner at the Strand theatre for the first three days of the week. It is of unusual interest because it features in the leading roles Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien, two screen artists who have become favorites among local moving picture fans. Miss Talmadge and Mr. O'Brien appear to advantage in their respective roles.

The play unfolds a very interesting story, that of an adventurous romance of a noblewoman and youth from England, who venture on a pilgrimage through the orient and deserts. Their love transcends obstacles and difficulties, but eventually they are saved from folly by the "Voice from the Minaret." Eventually, however, their love triumphs and a thrilling story is brought to a happy conclusion.

"The Ghost Patrol," a drama written by Sinclair Lewis of "Main Street" fame, is next in line and brings to the footlights numerous stars of filmdom. The story is that of an aged policeman, who served on one beat 30 years and refused promotions to remain with the people whom he loved and who regarded him as a father. The officer, because of advanced age, is forced to retire against his will and his petition for reinstatement later is refused. Broken-hearted, the aged officer dons his uniform and defies his superiors. What follows can be better appreciated on the screen. The story is well worth seeing.

In addition there is a series of pleasing sayings fro "Fun From the Press," as well as interesting and instructive current events and very enjoyable, pleasing musical numbers, not saying anything about the Century Comedy.

WILL CONDUCT ARTILLERY SCHOOL

Capt. Jackson Palmer, U.S.R., and several other reserve officers who have seen active duty with the artillery, are to conduct a school for those officers who have been appointed to detachments of the field artillery reserves allocated to Lowell who have not had previous active duty with artillery regiments. These men have all been in the service but some were in infantry ordinance, and quarter-master detachments. The school will deal with the bringing up of guns and getting them in position for firing at the enemy. Many intricate places of workmanship, such as range-finding, will be taught along with the main subject of getting the gun into a position where it can do the most damage to the enemy. The date for the first meeting of the school has not as yet been set, but it is expected that it will be in the near future.

NEW RESTAURANT IN MARKET STREET

A new restaurant has opened up in Lowell within the past 10 days. This statemene is news to many of the readers but it should not be. It is located on Market street, just beyond Cardinal O'Connell parkway and is called the "Minerva." It is run by three local Greeks who are endeavoring to upbuild their own section of the city.

A group of local newspapermen made a tour of investigation of this new eating place, and after sampling bits of deliciously cooked American and Greek food and going on a tour through the kitchens of this establishment, they were unanimous in their approval of the place both as to the quality of the food and to the cleanliness of the place. The first dish placed before them was a lobster salad. This was so good that it put all in the right humor for anything else that might come. Then came rice, rice fixed with peas and so deliciously cooked that it just naturally slid down. Then, the piece de resistance chicken. So tender and still so firm, it was the crowning joy of an evening. Another feature was their coffee. The chef claims that there is no better coffee to be had in th country and the gathering last night did not hesitate to call for a second and even a third helping.

The owners of this new restaurant are Christ Ziogkos, a former president of the Greek community and well-known business man; George Zouvelos, for 20 years a resident of Lowell and for many years in the restaurant business and Louis Kalofolias, a graduate of the Lowell high school and a veteran of the World war. The chef is Dionwsius Grivas, chief for the Athen's cafe in Boston for many years.

The location of this new eating place is extremely handy for people working in the vicinity of City Hall, and it is well worth going to even from down street. The many people in Lowell who like Greek food, and who always make it their business to go to the Athens when in Boston should go to the Athens when in Minerva.

NEW ORGANIZATION WORK PROGRAMS

Suggestions from chamber of commerce members covering new organization work programs for the present year, were received at executive headquarters this afternoon, when a meeting of the 1923 program committee was scheduled. Following the reception of suggestions and a discussion of various defined projects of interest to Lowell and its inhabitants as well as general business, a definite program of work for "carrying on" may be announced.

NIGHTLY SEA SHOWS

Innovation on American Liners to Offset Bars on Foreign Vessels

NEW YORK, April 2.—An innovation in trans-Atlantic travel on American liners, designed to offset the attractions of bars on foreign vessels will be nightly sea shows on the giant liner Leviathan when she goes into commission next June.

Sprightly musical revues, with a large chorus, will be given every night at sea and the program will be changed on every trip. The revue will be given in the ballroom and special lighting equipment and scenery are now being installed at Newport News, where the liner is being reconditioned.

BEGINS PROBE OF WARD-PETERS MURDER CASE

ALBANY, N. Y., April 2.—Atty. Gen. Sherman today began an investigation of the Ward-Peters murder case. He seeks to become familiar with every detail of the case, from the discovery of the body of Clarence Peters, former member of the marine corps, near the Kensico reservoir, to the dismissal of the indictment against Walter S. Ward, his confessed slayer.

The discovery of the body on May 16, last, was described by George Lohr and Frank Taxter, telephone linemen. Lohr said that at first he and his companions thought Peters was intoxicated and asleep. Taxter corroborated this testimony and added that when they investigated they found that Peters was dead. They did not touch the body, he said, as they feared they might leave finger prints and be accused as the murderers. Taxter declared that a photograph of the body, entered as an exhibit, did not show the position as they saw it. The photograph shows that the feet of the dead man were toward the road, while Taxter declared emphatically that when they discovered the body the head was toward the road.

STATE TO INVESTIGATE HOUSE OF DAVID

DETROIT, April 2.—Quo warranto proceedings against the Israelite House of David at Benton Harbor are understood to be planned by Governor Groesbeck, who has announced that he will investigate the cult because of testimony brought out at a civil suit against the colony.

The state will charge that the colony has violated the state religious law and therefore should be disbanded and required to dispose of its property.

Governor Groesbeck said today he would ask the legislature to amend the state religious act to prohibit the founding of associations similar to the House of David.

BRIEF BUT IMPORTANT WIRE DESPATCHES

PITTSBURGH, April 2—A wage increase for building trades and workers in Pittsburgh, ranging from 10 to 25 cents an hour, was announced today by the employers' association.

WASHINGTON, April 2—Under present conditions the timber supply of this country will disappear in between 40 and 50 years, W. B. Greeley, chief forester of the department of agriculture today told the special senate committee on reforestation.

TOKIO, April 2—(By the Associated Press) The recent announcement of the intention of the governments of Japan and the United States to cancel the Lansing-Ishii agreement recognizing Japan's "special interests" in China, is not treated as sensational news by the Japanese press, except for the papers that use the decision to attack the Japanese administration.

DANBURY, April 2.—The case of Mrs. Eleanor Williams, arrested near Waterbury, recently on a charge of perjury in connection with an affidavit in the divorce case of W. E. D. Stokes of New York was continued in court in Bethel today until next Monday, owing to the inability of Mrs. Stokes to be present.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Francis T. Hunter of New Rochelle, N. Y., defending champion, today advanced to the fourth round in the national indoor singles tennis tournament by defeating George Whitlock, of New York, 6—1, 6—3.

INDICTED ON CHARGE OF JURY TAMPERING

NEW YORK, April 2.—A federal grand jury today returned an indictment against the Great State Petroleum Co., Inc., of Texas, and 10 individuals, charged with using the mails to defraud investors in the stock of the corporation. The corporation is capitalized at $5,270,000.

EGG ROLLING ON WHITE HOUSE LAWN

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Rollicking egg rollers of the capital held full sway on the south grounds of the White House, thrown open for the annual Easter festivity. As it was still decidedly overcoat weather here the bright frocks of swarming youngsters were missing from the colorful scene of other years.

The occasion this year also lacked the presence of the president and Mrs. Harding, who were here to welcome the merrymakers last Easter.

ACTIVITY IN FACTORY LOCATION SITES

More activity is reported in factory location sites in Lowell, particularly in the Ayer City section of the city. Chamber of commerce reports several individuals "looking around" for choice locations in the Tanner street territory, where there are a number of good buildings suitable for general manufacturing and now idle.

The latest concern to locate in this part of Lowell where rentals are reasonable and railroad facilities adequate for all business purposes, is the Converters' Paper Co., a concern that is now installing machinery in the former plant of the Bancroft Piano Stool Co. at Lincoln and Tanner streets, preparatory to starting the manufacture of a new process paper.

Two men are constantly engaged in refitting the plant, which is considered excellent for location and appurtenances.

The plant was acquired through the Middlesex Safe Deposit and Trust Co. and is a two-story building located in what is fast becoming a strong industrial center of Lowell.

Nearby, on Lincoln street and within a short step of Tanner street, is another new concern that has started operations in special machine manufacturing. The Sun is informed that more room will be acquired shortly in the same building opposite the Converters' paper company's plant for still another new line of work.

Directors of the chamber of commerce, who held a business meeting and luncheon at headquarters this afternoon, had nothing new to report on industries said to be seeking permanent location in the Rigelow-Hartford plant. It is known that surveyors have been at work inspecting and "mapping out" one plant known as No. 2, for some time, preparatory to making a report on advantages and prospects for installation of new process machinery.

REPORT EX-KAISER AND WIFE HAVE SEPARATED

YORK, Eng., April 2. (By the Associated Press)—Reports of a serious disagreement between former Emperor William and Princess Hermine, his bride of a few months, which have cropped out from time to time, since the first of the year, are revived today by the Doorn correspondent of the Yorkshire Evening News who states he has learned "from a singularly well informed source" that the ex-kaiser and his wife have definitely separated.

When Princess Hermine left Doorn recently she went ostensibly to inspect family estates in Germany, but in reality asserts the correspondent, she has gone to live with her relatives.

"The actual separation is over a fortnight old," he declares, "but the secret has been well kept."

The ex-emperor's life is reported to be "very solitary and his establishment very simple, for although his private means are still ample they are not under his control."

$75,000 LEGACY FOR DR. GILMORE, V. C.

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask, April 2—Private detectives after a year's search, have located Dr. R. C. Wage Increases Effective in So. Carolina

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 2.—Thousands of textile operatives throughout South Carolina today began working on increased wages, raises of from 10 to 12 1-2 per cent becoming effective in more than a score of cotton mills. Most of the increases followed announcement of similar action by woolen and worsted mills in New England. The Pacific Mills Co., operating four plants here, yesterday announced a wage increase of 12 1-2 per cent for the more than 1600 operatives, in line with higher scales granted teh operatives of this company's New England mills. All the mills are operated on the non-union plan.

Camel Will Soon Be at Home in New York

NEW YORK, April 2.—Broadway will be as dry as Sahara and even a camel will feel at home there, said Palmer Canfield, state prohibition director in announcing today that 21 more cabarets and restaurants in the white light district would shortly be closed. He said the places in question had failed to heed warnings to cease selling liquor.

LONDON, April 2.—(By the Associated Press)—An American woman believed to be Mrs. Jessie May Mellon Bowie, aged 48, and possibly a resident of San Francisco, died suddenly Saturday night at a hotel in the West End of London. Adventures of The Twins

THE CHOCOLATE RABBIT

"HELLO," ANSWERED NANCY POLITELY. WE CAME TO SET THINGS TO RIGHTS."

Off went the twins to Sugar-Plum Land which lay between Castor Land and Plaster Land.

"What'd you come for?" asked someone.

"Hello," answered Nancy politely. "We came to set things to rights."

"Well, it's high time somebody did," said the rabbit. "King Gingerbread made a new law yesterday nobody can obey and we'll all have to go to jail unless he takes it back."

"What law?" asked Nick.

"He said bathing was a good habit and every Sugar-Plum Lander would have to take a bath twice a day."

"That's awful!" replied Nick. "Even once is bad enough."

"It won't do even at that," said the embroidery-pattern rabbit, waggling his ears "We can't even bathe once, any of us, except the Kewpie off the top of the wedding cake. It's made of bisque and won't run; but how in creation can folk made of cake and sugar take a bath? We'd all run away and mix together and when we dried off, like as not I'd have an ear off the knick-knack dog, a leg off the lemon cookie sparrow and a tail off the gumdrop pig."

"I never thought of that!" declared Nancy. "We'll go to see King Gingerbread at once. Mebbe he'll take the law back."

"Goody!" cried the chocolate rabbit. "I'll spread the good news." And away he hopped to tell the other Sugar-Plum Landers that nobody need endanger his life by taking a bath.

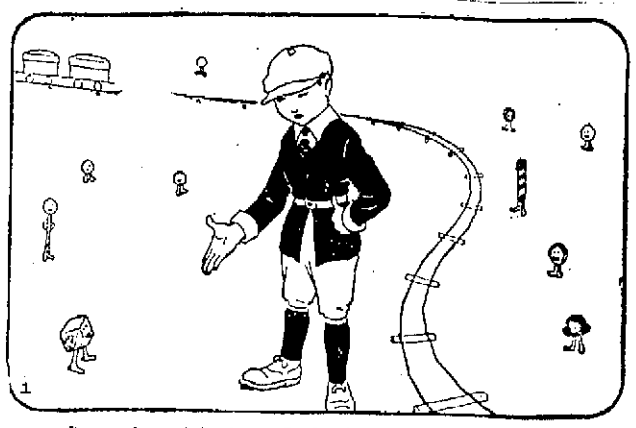

"Say," he called, stopping suddenly. "You'd better stop at the cut-out lady's house and ask her to sew King Gingerbread's buttons on straight. She sews them crooked and he gets mad and makes silly laws."

"All right!" called Nancy.

Jack Daw in Candy Land. Chapter 11

Caramel explained to Jack that the train of chocolate peppermints was bound for the land Jack came from. Jack watched it disappear in the distance and then said, "Oh, now I understand. Those candies will soon be in a drug store or candy store where folks can buy them."

"You're right!" shouted Caramel. And, at that moment, a lot of pretty little girls came running up. "Oh, Mister Caramel," said one of them, "we want to play drop the handkerchief. Will you let us take yours?" "Well," replied Caramel, "I will if I can find it."

Caramel looked all around but couldn't find his handkerchief. Then a happy thought struck him. "First of all, girls," he said, "I want to introduce you to Jack Daw. Maybe he will let you take his handkerchief." As the little girls bowed, Jack was told that they were candy kisses. (Continued.)

BRITISH STEAMER ON FIRE IN MIDOCEAN

BOSTON, April 3.—The British steamer City of Victoria is on fire in mid-Atlantic, according to messages from the vessel intercepted here last night. The position of the steamer was given as 18.50 west longitude and latitude 50.10.

The City of Victoria was said to be steaming at full steam towards Azores. She is a vessel of 3520 tons.

Thousands of radio fans listening in on an opera broadcast by a station in Boston were disappointed when the concert was abruptly discontinued while distress messages from the burning vessel were copied. The opera resumed, however, after an interruption of about 15 minutes.

Radio messages intercepted here from ships at sea said that a British steamer, the name of which was not caught, was rushing to the relief of the burning vessel. The distance of the unidentified vessel from the City of Victoria was not given.

Communication by wireless was being maintained between the City of Victoria and the steamer rushing to her side, radio messages said. The cause of the fire and how far it has spread were not learned from the intercepted wireless messages.

"PAGEANT BEAUTIFUL"

Easter Monday Party by M. T. I. at Auditorium Was Big Success

Spectacular in every respect, the "Pageant Beautiful," in connection with the annual Easter Monday party and dance under the auspices of the Mathew Temperance Institute in the Memorial Auditorium last night, was an unqualified success, the novel and aesthetic feature meeting with the unanimous approbation of more than 1500 interested spectators, and surpassing in engenuity any previous event of the popular local society. Miss Esther M. Downing and Miss Anna M. O'Day, Lowell Vocational school teachers, supervised the pageant, and $200 in gold was awarded the five best appearing classes by the following three impartial judges from the Lawrence schools: Miss Eliza Rigby Richards, Miss Helen L. Gilcreast and Mrs. Grace Collins Cavanaugh, who came to their decision after careful consideration of the color scheme, conception of character, order of group, style and workmanship and group as a whole.

JOHN W. SHARKEY, Pageant Director

The spectacle got under way at the conclusion of an entertaining concert program, which included a character song by Mr. George Sullivan, a solo dance by Miss Dorothy Mahoney, a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Angelo, a dance specialty by Mr. William Hinckley and Miss Blanche O'Reilly, and popular selections by Campbell's augmented orchestra.

Led by Floor Director Edward Mealey and Miss Anna Martin, and Assistant Floor Director James Duffy and Miss Helen Doran and directed by John W. Sharkey, the participants in the grand march presented an excellent panorama of beauty as they marched and counter-marched over the spacious floor. The array of colors, representing individual and distinctive characters the costumes of exquisite design, showing skilled workmanship and painstaking endeavor, and the entire general appearance of the marchers lent a charming atmosphere to the scene.

First prize was awarded to the "Columbia" girls, a group of misses from the high school annex class conducted by Mrs. Helen Rouse, and whose red white and blue costumes, typical of the character portrayed, merited the capturing of the $75, the award being made by Mayor John J. Donovan. The second prize of $50 went to the "French Sewing Girls," composed of a group of high school annex pupils under the direction of Miss Rose Ward. The "Periods" group, representing the evolution of dress from 1492 to 1923 was adjudged the winner of the third prize, $35. This group was directed by Miss Orina Mongrane, of the Greenhalge school. Fourth prize found the "Irish Colleens" in the winning role and merited a $25 prize. Miss Katherine McDonald of the high school annex is the teacher of this group. Fifth and last prize went to the "Easter Eggs" under Miss Mary Turgeon of the Franklin and Pawtucket schools. "Playing Cards" under Miss Helen Zollinger of the Moody school, and "Easter Lillies," under Miss Mary Bradley of the Butler school, received honorable mention. Other groups and their teachers were:

Witches, Miss Carol Allen and the girls of the high school annex; bridal party, Mrs. Mary Durant and girls of the high school annex; fairies, Miss Dorothy Ward and girls of the Pawtucketville school; Priscillas, Miss Mildred Mulqueeny and girls of the Colburn school; Polish national girls, Mrs. Elvira Wince and girls of the Varnum school; Miss Independence, Mrs. Catharine Burns and girls of the Colburn and Edson schools; Chinese girls Miss Marion Lawlor and girls of the Girls' City club.

Following the pageant, general dancing was held until 1 o'clock.

The affair was in charge of the following:

The pageant committee was composed of Arthur M. Flaherty, John J. Bowers and Thomas J. Tighe.

Justice James H. Sisk of Lynn presided at today's session of the superior court for civil cases, which was held at the Gorham street courthouse. The greater part of the forenoon was taken up with the calling of the list of cases on the court calendar and hearing motions.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a triple action of tort amounting to $2300 went to trial. In these cases the defendants are Marie A., Joseph and Frank P. Piscitello all of Methuen, while the plaintiffs are Bennie Oberstein, Lena Kaplan and Lena Bloomfield by her next friend, Fannie Bloomfield, all of this city.

The suits are brought to recover for damages to an automobile truck owned by Oberstein and also to recover for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by Lena Kaplan and Lena Bloomfield in an automobile accident which occurred on the Lawrence-Haverhill highway in Methuen on Mar. 6, 1922, when it is claimed an automobile owned by the defendants crashed into a truck owned by Oberstein and in which the latter and the two other plaintiffs were riding. The ad damna are as follows: Oberstein, $300; Kaplan $1,000, and Bloomfield $1,000. Qua, Howard & Rogers for the plaintiffs, and Walter T. Rochefort for the defendant.

WATER VERY LOW AT THE PAWTUCKET DAM

Even with the Merrimack waters along the upper course kicked up by a stiff gale that swept down the Pawtucket valley this morning, the water was actually lower than ever before at this season of the year on the cap of the dam.

Little ice is now coming down the stream, vast quantities having disappeared "in transit" on the way down from the north country.

The workmen employed in replacing the damaged and lost flashboards on the Pawtucket dam have completed several hundred feet more "lengths," putting the new boards in place on the top of the dam after bending up scores of iron supports that had been doubled up forward by the masses of ice and debris that came down the river earlier in th spring.

The dam top runway is now about half covered with new flashboards. The dangerous work was performed in highly efficient fashion and with real speed by the Locks and Canals workmen without any delays worth reporting.

Rains are predicted in the weather offing, the forecast being for cloudy weather tonight and a storm on the way that ought to reach Lowell tomorrow if it remains on its present course. The winds are to be shifting in the south and southwest. If long, heavy rains come with the highland grounds in their present condition, there may yet be "high water" recorded for the month of April at the Pawtucket dam.

World-Wide Pleas Ignored

executions makes uncertain the circumstances under which the sentence was carried out, but it seems probable that Monsignor Butchkavitch was put to death in the Moscow prison for the condemned to which he had been removed after the reprieve was refused him.

Appeals from the outside world which had poured in upon the soviet authorities had no effect in staying the hand of the executioners. Competent opinion, indeed, is that even the breaking of diplomatic relations by outside governments or a threat of war, would not have moved the Moscow officials from their course. Their last word in the case had been spoken, it appears, when the commuted to 10 years' imprisonment the death sentence upon Archbishop Zepliak, convicted at the same time as Vicar General Butchkavitch.

Great Britain made representations through its official agent at Moscow; the affair was the subject of warm debate in parliament, and the archbishop of Canterbury took the lead in voicing the attitude of the English clergy.

The protest of the American state department was based on humanitarian grounds and set forth "the earnest hope" that the life of the vicar general might be spared.

The prelate who has been put to death was father superior of the Church of St. Catherine in Petrograd. He held the title of prelate to His Holiness, granted by the pope for special services. He was 55 years old. He came from an old and wealthy family of Polish origin although he himself was a Russian citizen.

Monsignor Butchavitch was a conspicuous figure in the trial of the Catholic prelates and priests, at which he appeared bald headed, rosy faced and bespectacled, and he bore himself with marked serenity throughout the ordeal, which resulted in death sentences for himself and Archbishop Zepliak and prison terms for their 15 fellow priests.

Shop Crafts Will Hold Tag Day, April 14

14 solicitation of funds for needy strikers and their families.

It was first planned to hold the "Tag Day" this week, Saturday, but the event had to be postponed because another worthy organization has secured April 7 for fund collection campaign purposes. Mayor Donovan readily agreed to fix the date for Saturday, April 14, at the request of the ca rshop strikers.

Young ladies anxious to aid the coming campaign and dispose of tags on the streets during the day's quest for relief funds, have been requested to send their names to the secretary of the B. & M. Federated crafts, Room 19, Odd Fellows building, 84 Middlesex street.

The following locals of the shop crafts will hold meetings this week:

Machinists' helpers No. 972, Thursday evening, April 5, at 7.30; Sheet Metal Workers No. 439, Thursday evening, 7.30; Blacksmiths' local No. 57, (Trades & Labor hall), Thursday evening, 7.30; Carmen's local No. 135, Friday evening, 7.30. Machinists' local No. 319 has postponed its meeting scheduled for Thursday evening and will instead hold a special meeting for all members next Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in Odd Fellows building.

VESSEL ON A SECRET MISSION

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., April 3.—The mysterious vessel, a former submarine chaser which put in here on a secret mission yesterday, after hovering about the rum-runners' haunts off this island for a week went out again today, heading southeast by south in the direction to which it was reported the British steamer Avontown, reputed to have a half-million dollar cargo of whiskey aboard, had moved overnight. The Avontown's position was given as approximately 12 miles off shore.

The converted sub-chaser, unnamed except for the name "Magdalene" inconspicuously stencilled on lifebuoys, and said by her captain to hail from New London, Conn., was to have gone out last night after conference with three strangers who met her officers here. But by wireless or otherwise word came to delay departure until this morning. Then with the three strangers aboard, she went out. The crew, obviously unused to their duties, allowed her to ground on the end of the breakwater and they were 10 minutes getting her off. Before leaving they told islanders that they were going out to pick up a cargo.

Speculation as to the errand of the vessel, and the identity of her three passengers, ran from a report that federal agents had engaged her to help them attempt to arrest James W. Costello of Boston, sought as a fugitive from justice at Boston where he is wanted in connection with rum-running operations on a large scale—to the more generally accepted version that she was one of several vessels in cahoots with the Avontown in distributing the big cargo of whiskey, which federal agents say the latter brought here from Glasgow, under the auspices of a Montreal-Boston rum ring and a Scotch distillery.

LECTURE AT THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Prof. A. H. Wilde, dean of the School of Education of Boston university, addressed the students of the State Normal school today on the subject of "Educational Opportunities for Prospective Teachers." Prof. Wilde is a good speaker and his subject was of great interest to the students of the school who are soon to enter the field of teaching. He outlined the many opportunities open for these prospective teachers and told them in a concise way how to make the most of their opportunities.

Today's lecture by Prof. Wilde took the place of the one announced on the spring list of lectures for tomorrow afternoon. Miss Louise French, of the Massachusetts department of Education, who was scheduled for tomorrow afternoon's lecture, has been called to Washington so it was necessary to get someone to take her place. Mr. Weed, principal of the school, was very fortunate in being able to get Prof. Wilde to do this.

JURY OF WOMEN

Occupies Box in Trial of Mrs. Eiam, Charged With Murder

PIKEVILLE, Ky., April 3.—A jury composed entirely of women, the first feminine panel in the history of Pike county, occupied the box today in the trial of Mrs. J. D. Eiam, charged with having stabbed to death James Case at Hellever two years ago.

Case was stabbed, it was charged, after he had been shot down by a son of the defendant. The son recently was convicted by a jury in the Pike circuit court and sentenced to a term of six years in the state penitentiary.

NEW REIGN OF TERROR

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 3.—(By the Associated Press) A new reign of terror exists in western Thrace, where it is claimed the Greek army is driving out the Bulgarian population, according to statements issued by the government, which has just sent a note of protest to the allies.

The note claims protection for the minority population of the district under the peace treaty.

It is asserted that thousands of Bulgars are being driven from their homes under the pretext that they are aiding irregular bands.

The Greek government, replying to the Bulgarian accusations, stated that the Bulgarians in question were being deported to Crete for military reasons.

LOST PUP HAS MANY ADMIRERS

Found—a baby dog on a Moody street car this morning at about 6.30 o'clock. Operator Richard Arnold found the baby crawling about the floor when he arrived in the square and turned it in to the lost and found clerk in the street railway office in the square. Up to the time of going to press the baby was still there, being tenderly cared for by the clerk.

The pup is about eight weeks old and is a black and tan. Evidently he crawled out of some man's pocket on the car and the man went off without paying any attention to him. The pup has been well cared for and is so fat that it can hardly walk and it is quite an attraction to the operators and others who have occasion to go into the railway company's office.

If, by any chance, the owner of this dog does not want him, he may rest assured that it will be well cared for. Practically everybody who has seen the pup has put in a bid for him in case he is not called for, but so far it seems that it would remain in the hands of the lost and found clerk.

HATS OFF TO OLD MIDDLESEX COUNTY

Middlesex granges are told today in the latest number of the county agriculture and home economics "Bulletin," just out, that for the last 50 years this section of Massachusetts has stood near the head of the list with the counties of the United States for gross value of vegetables produced.

Today old Middlesex stands among the first five counties of the U.S.A., notwithstanding the tremendous increase in vegetable production during the last decade in other states.

Three California counties have come to the front. Cook county in Illinois is also in the first five.

Local members of the Middlesex North Agricultural society consider it some record for a comparatively small county in Massachusetts to rank so high in the entire nation.

ELECTION DAY IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, April 3.—Chicago voters today are balloting for a mayor, 20 aldermen and a representative in congress from the second Illinois district to fill the unexpired term of the late James R. Mann.

The race for mayor was enlivened by injection of the religious issue, some democrats charging that the K. K. K. had formed a phalanx to support the republican nominee, Arthur C. Lueder, former postmaster, and certain republicans in turn decrying the membership in the Roman Catholic church by Judge William E. Dever, the democratic standard bearer.

The candidates, themselves, including William A. Cunnae, socialist, continued to abstain from accusations and retorts discourteous, and last night for the first time spoke from the same platform, the pulpit of a church.

In the congressional contest the major party candidates are Morton D. Hull, former state senator, republican, and Barratt O'Hara, former lieutenant governor, democrat.

THE HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETIC FIELD

Spalding park, the athletic field of the Lowell high school, is to be cleaned up and showers and lavatories put in for the use of baseball and football players this spring. For a long time now the Alumni association has been collecting funds for the purchase and rebuilding of this park, but up to the present time it has only been able to collect enough to buy the park and to start work on absolutely necessary repairs.

About $13,000 has been collected altogether for the park; $7500 of this went to the purchase of the property, and the remaining money will be spent on repairs as aforementioned. Recently, a carpenter made a survey of the stands at the park and reported to Mr. Harris, president of the association, that the grandstand and left field bleachers were in fairly good condition and could be repaired for a moderate sum. No action has been taken on this matter, but it will be threshed out at the meeting of the Alumni association one week from tomorrow. Other matters that will come before this meeting will be the election of officers for the coming year and the question of what disposal to make of the portrait of Cyrus W. Irish, now being painted by Mrs. Mary Earl Wood.

Spalding park was for years the headquarters of the Lowell team of the New England baseball league and has been used by the high school for their baseball and football games. A short while ago it was thought that the park would be sold and split up into house lots. To avert this the Alumni association of the high school got together and collected money enough to purchase the property so that it would be saved for the use of high school athletes. After purchasing the property the association started a drive to collect funds to rebuild this into a stadium somewhat after the style of the Haverhill stadium. Up to the present there has not been money enough collected to make this possible, so the best that can be done is to repair the stands as they now are, and to fix up the grounds so that they will be in good condition for either baseball or football.

Notice of the meeting of the Alumni association will be present at the meeting man of this paper and it is the hope of the president, Mr. Harris, that everyone who is interested in the association will be present at the meeting next Wednesday evening, April 11.

LOVE QUESTIONNAIRE

College Women Asked to Answer Questions by Bureau of Social Hygiene, Inc.

NEW YORK, April 3.—College women throughout the country have been asked by the bureau of social hygiene, Inc., founded by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to answer unusually frank questionnaires concerning love, it was learned today.

Questions put to unmarried women include:

"How old were you when you first began to spoon?

"What effect, as you estimate it now, did spooning have upon the quality of your character?

"Will you give the reason why you have not married?

"What things are most stimulating to you?"

Married women and widows were asked these questions:

"Has your married life been a happy one? If not, why not?"

"Were you strongly attracted toward young men?"

"If so, how would you describe this attraction?

"Did you indulge, with one or more young men in the intimacies usually embraced in the term spooning?"

"If so, how far did you go in spooning?"

The purpose of the questionnaires is to aid in solving vexed questions of education and hygiene.

"We must have more information about the average woman in order to have any reliable guidance in the training of our girls and boys," the introductory statement reads.

AUDITORIUM CUSTODIAN

Collin H. Mackenzie is Elected Permanent Custodian by Auditorium Trustees

Collin H. Mackenzie last night was elected permanent custodian and building manager of the Memorial Auditorium. At a meeting of the trustees he received the affirmative votes of Charles H. Hobson, Thomas F. Houlger and Fred A. Estes, while Mayor John J. Donovan, the fourth trustee, favored Harry F. O'Sullivan, who led the eligible list of three presented by the civil service commissioner.

The election brought a long drawn out controversy to a close and settled a question that has been hanging fire for several weeks. Mayor Donovan, while voting for Mr. O'Sullivan, wished it understood he had nothing personally against Mr. Mackenzie and was casting his vote for the former only because he stood at the head of the list.

The trustees expressed regret at a division of opinion and each said he held Mr. Mackenzie's experience on the job entitled him to first consideration. With these counter expressions of good feeling the incident was closed.

FINED $150 FOR ILLEGAL KEEPING

TAUNTON, April 3.—John Dogchowski of Seekonk, was fined $150 in district court today, on a charge of illegal keeping of liquor. He pleaded not guilty but admitted, through counsel, that there was evidence enough to convict.

Deputy Sheriff John H. Nerney of Attleboro, who had seized $10,000 worth of alleged smuggled liquor at Dogchowski's farm while looking for gamecocks Sunday, said he had reason to think that the Seekonk man was acting for somebody "higher up." Mr. Nerney's theory was that the liquor came from boats off Block island. The cases were wet when seized.

CITY BUILDING CODE STANDS IN WAY OF BUILDING PROGRAM CONTEMPLATED HERE

Modification of Code is Recommended By Building Inspector Connor—Erection of Several Large Apartment Houses Held in Abeyance—Builders Say Local Building Laws Are "Hard Boiled"

The erection of several large apartment houses in Lowell is being held in abeyance at present and plans covering them undoubtedly will be torn up unless a modification in the city building code as suggested and recommended by Building Inspector Francis A. Connor is adopted. Plans for two such structures in Belvidere are complete, with each building to contain 12 or 15 apartments of particularly high grade, but the work will not be begun under the present code.

According to local building laws relative to the erection of four or five story brick buildings, exterior walls for the first two stories must be 16 inches in thickness, with 12-inch requirements above, and builders and investors say this extra four-inch thickness is not required in other cities in the state and creates an unreasonable additional expense in the matter of construction.

Supt. Connor says a revision of the code to a general 12-inch requirement, to conform with the laws in Boston, Brookline, Somerville, Cambridge and elsewhere, will greatly relieve building propositions now pending in Lowell and already he has presented the matter to the city council in form of a communication, recommending such a revision.

The special city council committee on public property, Councillor Arthur Genest, chairman, will meet very shortly to discuss the proposition and it is believed will look with favor upon it. Other members of this committee are Councillors James J. Gallagher, Frederick A. Sadlier, Arthur B. Chadwick and Daniel F. Moriarty.

SIMMONS IN COMPLETE AUTHORITY OVER K. K. K.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—An injunction which temporarily places William Joseph Simmons in complete authority over the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and prevents the disbursement of any money except on his order, has been issued by Judge E. D. Thomas of the superior court.

Col. Simmons' action was filed by his attorney, Ben H. Sullivan, against H. W. Evans, imperial wizard; F. L. Savage, chief of staff, and H. C. Montgomery, H. K. Ramsay, Brown Harwood, Tom Akers, T. J. McKinnon and N. N. Furney, members of the wizard's staff.

It alleges that Col. Simmons, as the emperor of the klan is its highest authority and actual executive head and charges Imperial Wizard Evans and his staff with interfering with the emperor in the operations of the order.

NOTORIOUS REBEL LEADER KILLED

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 3.—(By the Associated Press) The notorious irregular leader, Osman Agha and 12 of his followers have been killed while resisting arrest for the murder of Ali Chukri Bey, nationalist deputy, whose body was recently found buried near Osman's home.

The authorities now declare that the slaying of Chukri Bey, which was at first thought to have arisen from a political feud, was in reality a crime of private revenge.

CUTTER OSSIPEE DAMAGED

BOSTON, April 3.—The coast guard cutter Ossipee cannot do any further ice bucking without seriously straining the vessel, her commander reported today in connection with requests that he try and break the steamer Lake Forney out of the ice at Searsport, that he crash a channel through Eggemoggin reach and that he open a lane to other Maine harbors. The cutter is now leaking slightly as a result of her activities in fighting the ice to date.

STATE MOVES AGAINST CULT

To Compel Officials to Show Cause Why Organization Should Not Be Disbanded

LANSING, Mich., April 3.—(By the Associated Press)—Quo warranto proceedings to compel officials of the House of David colony to show cause why the organization should not be disbanded, were instituted in Ingham county circuit court here today by the state of Michigan.

The proceedings follow closely upon the hearing last week at Grand Rapids of the suit for an accounting brought against the colony by John Hansell and wife of Nashville, Tenn. At this hearing charges of fraud and immorality were made by the plaintiff.

The quo warranto action in effect is a demand upon the heads of the cult that they appear to defend its activities and show that it has not been conducted and organized in violation of the state laws, and offer a defense to the charge of the state that it should be disbanded and put out of business so far as its establishment in Michigan is concerned.

The state's action followed a long conference between Governor Groesbeck and Attorney General Andrew B. Dougherty. The attorney general stated that further information regarding the colony is expected today from Benton Harbor, upon which supplementary action may be based.

Governor Groesbeck said that the proceedings are to be as thorough as it is possible to make them.

OFFICERS ON LISTING DUTY MAKE RAID

BOSTON, April 3.—Special Officers Hugh J. Sullivan and Michael J. Kilroy, who have made a specialty of rounding up liquor law violators, put on police uniforms today for the first time in a year when they were detailed to assist in the annual police listing of residents. As they were going through the routine in a building on Hanover street, in the North End, they smelled moonshine.

Entering a room they found in full operation a 50-gallon still. They seized it, together with four barrels of mash and 10 gallons of finished product. When the occupant of the place, John Alves appeared a few minutes afterward, the officers told him to prepare for arrest later.

EXTENSION OF TIME FOR R. R.

Notice of Increase in Wages Posted at the Merrimack and Appleton Company Mills This Afternoon

The Merrimack Mfg. Co. and the Appleton Co., employing jointly more than 4000 hands, this afternoon posted notices of wage increases to become effective April 30. These are the first of the six major cotton corporations in Lowell to follow the lead of other great New England textile centers.

In the case of the Merrimack Co., Agent Jude C. Wadleigh said the amount of the advance will be 12 1-2 per cent., but at the Appleton the exact amount was not contained in the notices posted, although it is expected it will approximate the same percentage. Other local cotton corporations will post similar notices tomorrow.

Appeals For Amendment to Protect Child Labor, for Something More Than a Living Wage for Toilers and Selective Immigration—Speaker Says Lowell Auditorium is Finest Hall of Its Kind in the United States

Quite a large audience of men and women representative of many walks of life in Lowell including the best of her citizenry, rank and file, was aroused to a high pitch of patriotic enthusiasm and sympathetic emotion in Memorial Auditorium early last evening by the heart-stirring declarations of a sterling American citizen of foreign birth—the Hon. James J. Davis, secretary of labor in the cabinet of President Harding.

Rich in simple phraseology, probing the very innermost depths of some of America's problems, emphasizing the need of more common fealty to human aims and rights and picturing in vivid language without bombast or glaring colors the hopes and desires of the toilers in the workshops of the land who aspire to some of the blessings that the Creator would have them receive if men of power and wealth would only see the value of valorous service for the benefit of all instead of the intolerant few, the remarkable personal message brought to Lowell's sturdy citizenry, men, women and children of many races and tongues, last evening, will be remembered for a long time to come.

Entering the office of the Gulf Refining company in Tanner street about 8 o'clock this morning, C. E. Blake, local agent of the company, found Frank H. Barry of 1167 Gorham street, night watchman, sitting on a chair in a dazed condition with a bullet wound on the right side of his head and the company's 32-calibre revolver by his side. Although refusing to divulge the nature of the circumstances surrounding the head wound, investigation showed that a bullet had been fired from the revolver, glancing the man's head and lodging in a nearby wall. The wound was not sufficient to render him unconscious and the flow of blood was not profuse. The ambulance was summoned and upon its arrival, Barry walked from the office unassisted. At the Corporation hospital, where he was taken, it was stated that his name is not on the dangerous list.

According to Agent Blake, Barry has been employed as night watchman on the Tanner street premises for the past eight or nine years and has always performed his duties in a creditable manner. About two years ago his wife died of influenza, leaving him morose and discouraged, but his actions never betrayed any feeling of desperation. Company officials were surprised, therefore, when informed of the accident this morning.

None of the other complaints were substantiated, according to the election commissioners. The polls closed at 4 p.m.

FATHER CLAIMS BODY OF W. U. GRANT

WORCESTER, April 3.—James Grant of Uxbridge, father of Webster U. Grant, who was killed by state constables last Saturday in Westboro after he had tried to rob the Southboro drug store, today claimed the body of his son, and directed that it be placed in the Westboro tomb after the inquest next Friday. The elder Grant said that the lock of hair found in Grant's pockets was not that of a woman, but a lock of his own cut from his head by his mother when he was a child. She kept it as a keepsake until the young men visited the family home last fall, when he took it away with him.

URGES CONSOLIDATION

Lovett Says Southern Pacific and Union Pacific Sytsems Should Be Merged

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific systems should be consolidated, if the old Hill rail lines in the west are united, Robert S. Lovett, chairman of the Union Pacific, declared at a hearing yesterday before Henry C. Hall, a member of the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Lovett declared that teh consolidation of the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Burlington, as proposed by Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad in his "four system" plan for consolidating western railroads would set up a system for overshadowing the competitors provided by that project.

Mr. Lovett declared that the consolidation of the Great Northern, the North Pacific and the Burlington, as proposed by Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad in his "four system" plan for consolidating western railroads would set up a system for overshadowing the competitors provided by that project.

Criticizing the Holden plan in detail, he asserted it sent both the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific "far afield into territories where they have never been and where there is apparently no reason for them to go," and added:

The Union Pacific head also disagreed with Mr. Holden's view that each Pacific coast road should have a line extending to the Gulf of Mexico, asserting that the east and west traffic was the important and controlling factor with transcontinental lines and that the Holden plan would disarrange long existing export grain arrangements through Atlantic ports by favoring gulf ports.

Of the general matter of consolidation, Mr. Lovett said the commission's own plan, providing for seven systems should be departed from only with great caution.

"To guard against possible misunderstanding of my views," said Mr. Lovett, "I should like to add that I believe entirely too much is expected in some quarters with respect to these consolidations. Good undoubtedly will come from legal consolidation into one company of lines naturally allied and grown together as one system but legally held by numerous different corporations loosely combined in common control through stock ownership."

CHEAP LIVING LURES AMERICANS TO GERMANY

COBLENZ, April 3.—The cheap living in this part of the Rhine country continues to attract many Americans abroad, many of whom came here originally to visit the American occupation zone.

The occupied territories all along the Rhine enjoy the advantage of having prices regulated, in a manner not possible in unoccupied Germany, where Americans and other strangers sometimes complain they are overcharged, or else compelled to pay higher prices than Germans. The living is cheap because of the relative worthlessness of the mark when exchanged for the dollar or the pound sterling.

How it works out for the German is another matter. What is cheap to the foreigner is dear to him.

In the case of automobile drivers, the American may use a taxi for a day, and the entire bill will not be more than three or four dollars, out of which sum the driver gets the equivalent of 25 cents.

In other words, the average daily pay of the skilled workman is 3,000 to 4,000 marks. This also applies to railway workers of all classes.

When it is noted that a man's shirt cost 15,000 to 20,000 marks, and a pair of shoes 30,000 to 60,000 marks, and both articles of second grade quality, it may be inferred how high the depreciated mark has put the cost of living for the German.

One of these skilled laborers, now driving an automobile for hire, was an infantry captain during the war. After the war he worked for the British army of occupation, and by great good luck made some money when the reduced British forces began selling off supplies. He accumulated a capital in marks the equivalent of $10,000.

With this sum he decided to buy a farm and take his wife and children to the country. He bought a 300-acre farm near Coblenz and went to work. His surplus he invested in farm equipment, horses, stock and seeds.

By the summer of 1920 he had a fine harvest, but the diminished value of the mark cut his crop and land values in two. This process continued until he failed.

He sold most of his land and is now obliged to work for a few thousand marks a day, with the mark still depreciating in value and prices going higher. He and his family now eat black bread and wear rags.

$65,423,000 PAID IN CHURCH PENSIONS

CHICAGO, April 3.—Pension funds of eighteen Protestant denominations in the United States amount to $65,423,000, according to a statement issued by Dr. J. B. Hingeley, Chairman of the Interdenominational Secretaries Conference in charge of the church pension funds of Protestant churches.

The amount is divided as follows: Northern Baptist, $9,000,000; Southern Baptist, $975,000; Congregational, $5,750,000; Disciples, $175,000; Lutheran, Augustana, $337,000; Lutheran, Missouri Synod, $2,500,000; Lutheran, Norwegian, $500,000; Lutheran United, $150,000; Methodist, Canadian, $2,500,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, $17,500,000; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, $2,000,000; Presbyterian Church, Northern, $8,105,000; Presbyterian Church, Southern, $1,400,000; Presbyterian United, $327,000; Protestant Episcopal, $13,250,000; Reformed Church in the United States, $191,000; Reformed Church in America, (Dutch), $393,000; United Brethren, $100,000.

The number of pensioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church is constantly increasing, declared Dr. Hingeley. "The retired Methodist ministers number 3,460, an increase of more than 45 over 1921," he said. "There are 3,857 widows, an increase this year of 29. The dependent orphans are 861, an increase of 46. The total number of persons on the pension fund of the Methodist Episcopal Church is 8,018, an increase of 120 over 1921. The total paid by the Methodist Episcopal Church for pensions in 1922 was $2,586,346, an increase over 1921 of $161,767.

"In 1870 the Methodist Episcopal Church contributed through collections in the church $129,998; in 1880, $130,944; 1890, $137,093; 1900, $360,402; 1908, $606,000; 1916, $1,226,226. This was the first year after the organization of the Board of Conference Claimants and in 1922 $2,586,346 was paid.

"The annual conferences with the largest investment in cash are Kansas $542,027, Detroit $527,102, New England $458,792, Illinois $444,000, Baltimore $420,716, Central Pennsylvania $409,700, Nebraska $333,000, Indiana $315,161, Central New York $308,241, Michigan $198,667, Erie $192,600, New England Southern $196,000, Tennessee $128,008, Central Illinois $161,526, Central German $131,063, Colorado $102,660 and Chicago German $100,000."

FLORIDA LOWEST STATE IN UNION

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Florida, speaking physically, is the lowest state of the union.

The geological survey has just completed a topographical investigation showing that the peninsula state's highest elevation, located in Polk county and known as "Iron Mountain," is only 325 feet above sea level. The widely known Everglades, comprising an area 150 miles long and about 100 miles broad, are at an average elevation of less than 50 feet above the sea, while the surface of the shallow lake within them, Okeechobee, is not quite 20 feet above sea level.

Even the one or two ridges within the borders of the state scarcely rise to 300 feet elevation. The capital, Tallahassee, is located on the slope of one of the uplands, and within the city border the elevation varies from 300 feet above sea level to less than 80 feet.

NEW CHASSIS TO ASSURE SAFE LANDING

LONDON, April 3.—An airplane undercarriage that is practically "uncrushable" is the remarkable product of a British inventor. The new landing chassis looks to the uninitiated like any ordinary two-wheeled undercarriage, but it is fitted with an ingenious system of pneumatic cylinders which prevent accidents even when the machine is being landed by an inexperienced pilot.

In a recent test of the new undercarriage Herbert Hikler, holder of the non-stop flight record to Turin, demonstrated that it would withstand shocks which would smash the ordinary chassis. He flew the machine at full speed into the ground from a height of 20 feet, at an angle that would have turned an ordinary airplane over on its nose. The undercarriage absorbed the shock without even bouncing.

MISCONDUCT IN WASHINGTON

SPOKANE, Wash., April 3.—Mrs. Miles Poindexter's newspaper letters concerning activities in Washington, D. C., society, with particular stress on drinking and gambling, are the basis of petitions ready for circulation here today addressed to Attorney General Daugherty and asking grand jury investigation of the alleged misconduct.

Plans were announced for seeking signers to the petitions in other western cities, including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle.

The head of the committee in charge is H. C. Harris of Spokane. Co-operation of religious organizations in making the petition a success will be sought. The expenses will be met by private subscriptions, he added.

Mrs. Poindexter, wife of former United States Senator Poindexter, who now is ambassador to Peru, wrote her first letter to a local newspaper. It caused so much comment that others were sought and her "exposures" of Washington society life are appearing in a number of papers as a weekly feature.

The petition as outlined by Mr. Harris includes one presented last week to the Spokane Federated Women's Christian Temperance union, asking further information from Mrs. Poindexter. The union forwarded that petition to its Washington, D. C. representative without action or endorsement.

In addition, Mr. Harris' petition carries paragraphs laudatory of Mrs. Poindexter. The eight queries of the petition presented to the W.C.T.U. are included as follows:

"What is the name of the senator whose 'wife was an expectant mother who was dizzy with strong drink?

"At whose home was a certain card party held at which there were three subjects of conversation (a liquor) (b, where to get it and what price) and (c, where to have it tested?)

"Who was the farm bloc senator who would not give his wife large sums of money to gamble with?

"What modern apartment house in Washington has a liquor tester as part of its equipment?

"Who was the senator's wife who said she could have liquor tested at this apartment house?

"What are the names of senators, representatives and cabinet officers in whose homes liquor is served to guests?

"In what embassy is liquor served?

"What are the names of the high officials of the government in whose homes gambling at bridge is permitted?"

Conrad, of the Park Street church, Boston, broadcasted and the members of the Belmont church will "listen in." Amplifiers are to be placed in the church auditorium attached to powerful receiving apparatus. The Belmont church members will join in hymns sung in the Boston church.

TO CORRECT SCIATICA AND NEURALGIA

Try the Treatment That This Brockton Woman Found So Successful

Neuralgia is due to malnutrition or nerve starvation. The pain of neuralgia has been described by an eminent scientist as "the cry of a nerve for food." The most direct way to correct neuralgia is to build up the blood so that it can give the nerves the elements they need.

Sciatica, or sciatic rheumatism, as it is sometimes called, is neuralgia of the sciatic nerve. It is stubborn in resisting treatment but calls for the same remedy as sciatica.

Mrs. James R. Martin, of No. 68 Denton street, Brockton, Mass., suffered for two years with sciatic rheumatism. She says:

"My trouble first started with a pain low down on my left side and seemed confined to a space about the size of a half dollar. It was a dull aching pain and made me very nervous. Gradually it grew worse and became sharp and shooting. I became very miserable, my blood was thin and I had but little color.

"I had medical attention but got very little relief until through reading about them in a newspaper, I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. After I had taken the first box I noticed improvement. They effected a great change for the better in my blood. I took five boxes altogether and the pains are entirely gone. I am satisfied that the pills exactly suited my case and I have recommended them to others."

INTERNATIONAL COURT

American Membership Probably Will be Used by Harding as Subject on Tour

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 3.—American membership in the international court of justice probably will be used by President Harding as a subject of one or more speeches on his proposed western tour, it was said here today by members of the president's vacation party. Last night the president talked for some time with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university on the subject.

Dr. Butler recommended the proposal of membership in the international court as an issue which the republican party could safely carry before the country. Arguments that such membership would involve the United States in the League of Nations are illogical, he asserted.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Arrested on a charge of illegal possession and sale of liquor, although claiming diplomatic immunity because he claimed to be connected with the Cuban legation, Maris Fragrais, 23, spent last night in a police cell.

Fragrais, who told the police he came to Washington recently from Cuba, was arrested after he is alleged to have sold half a case of rum to a policewoman. A search of Fragrais' rooms was said by the police to have yielded another half case.

LOUISIANA TO CHECK WASTE OF GAS

MONROE, La., April 3.—The United States bureau of mines, having declared that the natural gas in this country is not inexhaustible, and that the supply is dwindling rapidly, persons interested in conservation of Louisiana's natural resources are launching a campaign with the object of either putting an end to the existence of carbon black plants in this state, or at least curbing their operations.

The north Louisiana gas field is the largest producing field in the world, and the wells in the Ouachita-Morehouse district now are giving up the enormous total of 1,380,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily for the manufacture of carbon black. Ninety per cent of this gas is wasted, it is claimed, and the conservationists have determined to do something to put a stop to it, if for no other reason than that industries in search of cheap fuel hesitate to locate in or near the field for fear the gas will be exhausted in the near future.

The Texas legislature recently refused to enact a law which would have permitted the establishment of carbon black plants in the gas fields now being developed in that state, and it is expected the Louisiana legislature at its next session will be called upon to take steps to remedy the situation here.

Carbon black is used for many purposes, the best known of which is in the manufacture of printer's ink. It is nothing more than what is commonly known as soot, and its production is a simple process. The natural gas flame is permitted to burn against a metal plate across which a mechanical scraper moves. The carbon, or soot, is scraped off, falls into a conveyor and is carried to the packing room.

Profits from the business are enormous, and any attempt to break it up is certain to meet with stiff opposition, as was the case when the question was considered at the state constitutional convention two years ago.

The cost of drilling and piping a gas well which will produce from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 feet of gas daily is placed at $20,000. Construction of a carbon plant capable of producing 3,600 pounds of carbon daily requires $100,000. The cost of a gasoline absorption plant which will produce from the gas, as a by-product, from 1500 to 2000 gallons of gasoline daily is $50,000. The total investment represents $170,000.

The 3,600 pounds of carbon at 15 cents a pound will bring $540 and 1500 gallons of gasoline at 15 cents a gallon $225, a gross daily operating income of $765. Operating expenses and supplies approximate $225 daily, leaving a net profit of $540. The net profit in one year is slightly less than $200,000 on an investment of $170,000. The plants are virtually automatic in operation, and Governor Parker has declared he knows of one consuming 10,000,000 feet of gas daily with a force of only 11 men. The plants operate night and day, seven days a week.

Louisiana in 1921 produced 31,034,000 pounds of carbon black, or 53 per cent of the country's total output, and to do so burned 32,101,800,000 cubic feet of gas.

REQUIEM MASSES

ROWLANDSON—There will be a requiem mass for the repose of the soul of Modwenna M. Rowlandson, Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock in the Immaculate Conception church.

Council Will Consider Mayor's $30,000 Veto

of the order the mayor did not condemn the idea, in fact, expressed the belief that some measure of relief should be worked out, but he did declare that he felt the $30,000 cost exorbitant.

It was learned today that the board of public service will give a public hearing on the matter on Thursday, April 12, at which time it is expected a full discussion will take place.

The council cannot take any action upon the veto tonight, but during the seven days that must elapse President Gallagher hopes a committee in conferences can straighten out the matter satisfactorily.

The council tonight will conduct a public hearing on the proposition of Councilor Cosgrove to acquire the Washington Tavern property and property adjacent to it, as a site for a new building proposed to house police and fire department headquarters. It is understood that remonstrance will develop, but it is expected the matter will receive general and thorough discussion.

MAN FLOGGED IN TEXAS

K. K. K. Denies Connection With Whipping of R. W. Burleson

TAYLOR, Tex., April 3.—R. W. Burleson of Wear, Tex., a small town near here, was in a hospital today recovering from a flogging Sunday night. His head was gashed and his shoulders mutilated.

Representatives here of the K.K.K. denied connection with the whipping, and the police apparently had no clue.

According to Burleson, the police said, he had been notified by a preacher that an attack was to be made on him. The preacher handed him a card bearing the name of the "Ku Klux Klan No. 176 of Georgetown," Burleson said, adding that he was told he must quit going with a certain woman. He had scoffed at the notice, he told the police.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN MICHIGAN ELECTION

DETROIT, April 3.—Republican voters of Michigan "swung back into line and made a splendid start for the presidential campaign," Burt D. Cady, chairman of the state republican central committee, declared today in discussing yesterday's election, in which the entire republican ticket of minor state officers was victorious.

Democrats found some encouragement in the election of Frank E. Doremus, former congressman, as mayor of Detroit, but republicans pointed out that the mayoralty election was nonpartisan. Doremus won over James W. Inches, former public service commissioner.

WILSON "LISTENED IN" ON LEAGUE ADDRESS

NEW YORK, April 3.—Woodrow Wilson listened to the address of Lord Cecil on the League of Nations here, last night, by radio, at his home in Washington.

When it was announced that the former president was hearing the address, the diners at the Hotel Astor rose to their feet and cheered. Mrs. Wilson, who was present, smiled happily as she joined in the tribute to her husband.

Mrs. Wilson is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Baruch on her first visit to New York in two years.

PROHIBITION IN EFFECT IN TURKEY

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 3.—The authorities put into effect today the delayed prohibition order in response to instructions from Angora.

A Turkish prohibition decree was to have been put into effect on March 1 but its promulgation was postponed indefinitely, dispatches said, because of the large liquor contracts involved. The nationalist authorities last December, ruled that no alcohol could enter Turkey after December 5, and that stocks on hand must be consumed before March 1.

SMALL DOCKET IN THE DISTRICT COURT

Two children of Mrs. Bouchard, aged 2 and 5.

Joe Madoro, the owner of the hotel, was severely burned on the back, face and hands. Arrangements were made to take him to Presque Isle hospital this afternoon. Paul Parent of Grand Falls, N. B., was burned about the neck and head. Mrs. Mary Rolx of Massachusetts sustained burns on the arms and feet.

The fire caught from a stove in the hall on the ground floor, thus cutting off escape by the stairway and hall for the 15 persons in the house. An exciting scene followed some of the guests and servants being taken out of the windows and down ladders by those first to respond to the alarm, while others jumped to the ground.

The Bouchard children were found in bed where they had been suffocated. The mother's body was found on the floor of the room which they occupied. She apparently had been awakened but was overcome by smoke before she could make even an attempt to save her children.

Through a misunderstanding when help first came, they were told there was no one upstairs, but later the bodies were found.

NOVEL WAGES TO PAY TUITION CHARGES

CHICAGO April 3—The odd occupations followed by students at mid-western universities to pay their way through school range all the way from serving as state legislator to sleeping in undertaking establishments to save room rent.

The state legislator is Everett A. Addington, of Indiana University, member of the house of representatives. He is blind, and to add to his income from the state he tunes pianos. His home is at Farmland, Ind.. The boys who have solved their room rent problem by working in undertaking establishments in return for quarters attend the University of Nebraska.

Ordinary occupations, trades and avocations followed by thousands of students to help pay expenses are too numerous to enumerate; Indiana University alone reports 65 trades and employments. Some of the occupations are unusual.

At Kansas State Agricultural College a young man does housework and watches children while parents are absent. This institution has a detective whose occupation has been tracking cigarette bootleggers for the mayor of his town. Another boy there sells salad dressing, while a pair of boys hung out this sign: "Dancing Lessons and Ford Repairs."

A University of Nebraska boy took a contract to paint a house, and employed student help to finish the job. Honor stands, where sweets are sold without attendants, are not uncommon. A boy at Nebraska, operating such stands, reported his net profits averaged 65 cents daily.

At Washington University, St. Louis, a student firm issues free blotter pads, making money out of the advertising thereon. The giving of blood for transfusion is a regular occupation of some University of Minnesota students. Marquette University reports one grave digger, and an athlete who makes money as a dance hall bouncer.

Indiana University, in addition to Mr. Addington has two other blind students paying their way, a girl who crochets, and a boy who sells sandwiches.

At Purdue about 75 per cent of the men are helping to pay their own way, while many young women also work. Among the Purdue workers is a young night engineer whose only hours of sleep are from 4.00 p. m. to 9.30 p. m., yet he has a prospect of winning the highest honors for four years of scholarship.

At Ohio University students earn money for tuition in various ways. Some are official bearers of bodies at funerals, some teach Hebrew on the side, and one leases a house and sublets the rooms.

The Missouri legislature has under consideration a bill to appropriate $55,000 yearly for the employment of student labor.

D. W. Wood, 60, of New Orleans, La., declares he has virtually been made young again by the recently discovered Korex Compound, which is pronounced superior to "gland treatments" as an invigorator and revitalizer. "It has brought me back to as good, healthy physical condition as I enjoyed at 35," he writes. "I am apparently as supple as at 25." Mr. Wood says he would not take $5000 for what the compound has done for him.

The compound is a simple home treatment in tablet form, absolutely harmless, yet the most powerful invigorator known. Acting directly on lower spinal nerve centres and certain blood vessels, it often produces amazing benefits in 24 to 36 hours. In nation-wide tests, it has won the praises of thousands who suffered from nerve weakness, premature age and lack of vital force. Physicians say it gives speedy satisfaction in cases that defy other treatments. Elderly people pronounce it a real "fountain of youth."

Knowing that this news may seem "too good to be true," the distributors invite any person needing the compound to take a $2 double-strength treatment, enough for ordinary cases, with the understanding that it costs nothing if it fails. If you wish to try this guaranteed invigorator, write in strict confidence to the Mellon Laboratories, 45 Massachusetts Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. If you prefer, you may enclose $2; or simply send your name, without money, and pay the postman $2 and postage on delivery. In either case, if you report after one week that the Korex Compound has not given you satisfaction, the laboratories will return your money immediately. This offer is fully guaranteed, so nobody need hesitate about accepting it.—Adv.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Fear and suspicion, twin demons which have possessed the world, and can be exorcised only by some form of an association of nations, are the forces that stand between France and Germany in the settlement of the reparations question, as they stand in the way of settlement of every other international question, Lord Cecil, noted British exponent of the League of Nations, declared in an address before the Foreign Policy association last night.

Addressing his first American audience, Lord Robert, who has come to the United States for a series of speeches on behalf of the league, declared it was essential for world safety to "turn the minds of nation from force as the only remedy."

"Take the question of reparations," he said. "What is it that makes that question so intractable? It is that though the French are anxious for the Germans to pay, they are also anxious lest, if they are allowed to get on their feet sufficiently to pay, they will become again a danger to the security of France.

"Do not think I am attacking the French on that account.

American Cities Might Be Bombed

"We have to get a new spirit among the nations of the world. We have got to teach them that persuasion, public opinion, are of far greater potency than mere physical compulsion."

He said that in the next war, if one came, it was not conceivable that American cities might be laid waste and their populations destroyed by airmen flying from over the sea.

He said the three most terrible arms of warfare—aircraft, submarine and land forces—had not been at all affected by the Washington treaties. There was little likelihood, he declared, that rules for submarine use would be respected.

"Certainly the experience of the last war is against any such hope," he said. "Scarcely one rule for the humanizing of warfare was observed, and though we may think that our enemies were the worst, yet in all candor and frankness, I doubt if there is any single nation which has a clean sheet in the matter."

Asks Can America Avoid War

Citing the achievements of the League of Nations, he concluded:

"I do not come as a suppliant for American help. I come to tell you what, as it seems to me, the league really is and what it has done, and to hear from you any criticisms or advice as to its action.

"I do not doubt or undervalue for a moment the immense services America has rendered in recent years to Europe. But has America done enough for herself?

"She desired and rightly desires to be free from the entanglements of Europe and its concerns. But can she be free from them?

"In 1917 America felt compelled to enter the World war. It was not that she desired war—far from it. Will anyone say that if another great European war took place involving, as wars always do, great interests of right and wrong, that it would be possible in the future any more than in the past for America to stand outside and take no part?

"If it be really true that even on this side of the Atlantic there is no certainty that this nation can avoid the worst of all entanglements—participation in war—is it really so unreasonable to suggest that it is an American interest to erect safeguards against the outbreak of war in any part of the world, for when war breaks out, no one can tell how far it will spread.

"It is for you here to say what answer should be given to this question. In any case, we in Europe must go on. We cannot draw back from this great experiment. We are bound by every obligation of prudence and honor to pursue it to the end."

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT WORK

Marion, Ind.—"I was all run-down, nervous and bent over. I could hardly drag around, let alone do my work. I read some letters in the papers telling what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and I thought I would try it. Then a man told my husband about his wife and what good it had done her and wanted him to have me try it. I took one bottle and could see what it did for me in a week's time, and when I had taken three bottles I had gained both in strength and weight and was doing my own work. I took it before my last baby was born and it helped me so much. I sure am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who suffers from female ailments, for I know by experience what it can do. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, also the Liver Pills, too, and think them fine."—Mrs. WM. ELDRIDGE, 620 E. Grant Street, Marion, Indiana.

A record of nearly fifty years service should convince you of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

intimate testimonial of high regard and confidence in which the people of Lowell as a whole played a memorable part. The scenes outside and within the great Auditorium just before 5.15 o'clock, when the distinguished cabinet officer from Washington was scheduled to appear and deliver his address on "Labor, Immigration and Naturalization," will long be remembered by every man and woman who participated in this meeting.

That more than ordinary interest had been created in the advance announcements of Mr. Davis' coming, was very evident when hundreds of curious visitors, attracted to the Auditorium by the formal news reports of the meeting program, stood on the main entrance steps of the Auditorium and inspected the throng of eager men, women and young people of both sexes who crowded the outside promenade walks on their way to the late afternoon rally of Lowell's citizenship.

It was a typical Lowell throng of the usual rank and file that awaited Mr. Davis at the Auditorium. Business men, bankers, representatives of leading textile corporations, industrial agents, superintendents, merchants of the city, store clerks, women and girls who gain livelihood in mills, stores and private offices—even eager newsboys were there to see what there was to see and hear what might be said.

Congressman Rogers Presides

The appearance of the medium-sized, trim-looking athletic figure of Secretary Davis leading the way across the Auditorium platform at the head of a long line of Lowell business men forming the Rotarian reception committee, was the signal for prolonged applause from those in floor seats and galleries.

Congressman John Jacob Rogers was called upon to introduce the evening's chief guest, and was warmly welcomed. He briefly expressed his pleasure at the honor of presenting "the visitor from the Harding official family," and praised the chief guest who, he said, was born 50 years ago in a little town in Wales and came to America to work his way up the ladder to a his position in American citizenship. The congressman referred to the fact that Mr. Davis went to work in a Pennsylvania town steel and iron works at the age of 11 years and that is one reason why today the secretary of labor has taken such a warm interest in American toilers, particularly the problem that has to do with the curse of child labor, and its many depressing evils.

"Allow me to introduce you to our secretary of labor," said Mr. Rogers in closing his introductory remarks, "a secretary who labors for labor, a man who has risen to one of the greatest positions in the cabinet of the president of the United States of America—the Hon. James J. Davis."

Vigorous applause greeted the visiting secretary, all present rising and standing.

Secretary Davis' Address

He lauded those who were responsible for the Auditorium and declared that no finer tribute could be erected to the memory of the heroes of war who fought for their country with such valor, he declared, that the monument wherein he spoke must and should be an inspiration to the boys and girls of Lowell for preserving good government. It is even worthy of holding therein a national democratic or republican convention, the secretary added, amid laughter and general applause. He stated that a splendid hall of merit in design has also just been erected in Mooseheart, Ill., for the great fraternal order of Moose which he has the honor of representing in official channels. He added that he was mighty glad to receive an invitation to Lowell, glad that he had accepted the invitation and immensely proud of the new friends that he had made so quickly in this city.

He then launched into his main address, covering vividly many present-day questions of labor, immigration and naturalization. He declared that his arduous work in the public service department as a cabinet official included the adjudication of labor troubles, the handling of many different and important bureaus, naturalization, immigration problems, the collecting of business and labor statistics, looking after the heart-breaking problems of women and children employed in various industries of the country and also participating in the activities of the new federal board of vocational education.

The secretary declared that today 41,000,000 inhabitants of the nation are gainfully employed. Bureaus survey the wages paid in industries of all kinds, make recommendations and endeavor to adjudicate dangerous disputes in working conditions with ramified problems on the side for good measure. The difficulties and trials of the secretary of labor are not only arduous, but call for humane endeavors in every line of every-day affairs that involve workingmen and women and organized capital, Mr. Davis said.

"The power of wealth is enormous," said Mr. Davis. "If you lower wages $1 dollar per day, there is a loss of the workers' purchasing power amounting to $41,000,000 a day. Today it is a business proposition that confronts the country—the proposition of having men receive the highest possible wages. And when men are employed at decent wages, the purchasing power of the workers is higher and the country more prosperous every time. When the coal miners' wages were cut in two, as they were once upon a time not long ago, and when they were employed but three or four days per week and only during certain periods of the year at that, the country's loss in wages and business was quickly felt."

He told of the coal mine operations that at one time had outputs totalling 500,000,000 tons a year and of the effect caused by the cutting down of the national output to 250,000,000 tons.

He described briefly the effect that coal shortages and the lowering of the nation's wage earnings have on the country as a whole. He told of deplorable conditions in many industrial communities apart from the coal territories, where wages were low today, where employes have to purchase goods in "company stores" and where they have no opportunity to save any money for future needs. He declared sternly that it was not fair to loyal American workingmen and women to work for unfair wages or for merely "living wages."

Living Wage Not Enough

"Paying the workers only enough money to meet their rents and secure just enough to eat and barely clothe themselves, is not justice today, and never was!" declared Secretary Davis, warming up to his subject.

"The workers' wages ought to be large enough on Saturday nights not only to pay all bills for the maintaining of the homes, educating and clothing the children, but there ought to be money left over to put into savings banks and protect the families in the future!" (Applause.)

Amendment to Prohibit Child Labor

"My friend Rogers here (turning to the congressman) knows that we ought to keep the children out of the mills and put them into the schoolhouses. John is in accord with my sentiments. We need more education for the children instead of mill work. But what do we see on every hand in this country today? Children of 7, 8, 9 and 10 years of age working in some textile mills in some parts of the land, and laws prohibiting children's toil in other sections. This irregular labor problem involving youth of America must be abolished! It must be stopped—this employment of mere children in industrial establishments! A constitutional amendment must be passed to stop them from going into the mills of this country to toil with their elders." (Applause.)

Mr. Davis declared that conditions in the field of employment, labor and industry, must be radically changed. Today too many children cry for food, men are out of work. And when that condition arises, as it frequently does, the women and children always suffer first.

"And, Oh! the price they had to pay—the people!" went on the speaker. "It was a disgrace to civilization! No pirates of the Spanish Main ever committed the deeds that the railroad coal barons of this country performed! (Applause) How they held, up this country you all know. And at what a price! (Applause).

"But these things will right themselves in the end. And I wish to God that yesterday, Easter Sunday, those men saw the Golden Rule. I hope they did or some of them. Wouldn't it be glorious if they did?" (Applause).

Work For Disabled Soldiers

Mr. Davis told of the good work that has been done for the rehabilitation of disabled soldiers, declared strongly that President Harding wanted to do everything possible to take care of the war veterans and their dependents, and said that the estimated first cost of some $140,000,000 was approved, and the estimated future cost of $500,000,000 also endorsed, for the government intends to take care of the boys who fought the good fight.

He explained in some detail the rehabilitation plans that are now being completed and prophesied that "better times" are coming for all who are looking to the administration for relief and succor in the work of rehabilitating the veterans who won the World war.

He declared that America is in better shape today because American business men "are learning something." America's great heart, he added, is safe with the workingman who toils from early morning to night. He decried the fact that so many women today are engaged in industry, but declared that the nation is improving its laws and remedying many labor problems and evils right along.

"Don't berate our business men!" continued Mr. Davis. "Talk to them and they'll try to do the right thing. Encourage them! Women today are better treated than they were in the days that are gone. It used to be necessary for many more women to leave their children at home and go to work to keep their homes. It is all wrong, of course, but times are changing."

The secretary praised the mother love that causes many to slave and toil for their offspring and declared that the toilers of the feminine sex today remain a great problem. He said he believed that a movement for the better was under way, and he spoke not for the republican party or Congressman Rogers, but for "Jim" Davis.

He said there are 30 languages spoken in his home town in Pennsylvania and he still lives there and is happy there. All the workers desire, he said, is to live and learn and understand, and receive decent treatment.

Wants Selective Immigration

"There is room in America today for good men and women," Mr. Davis continued, "but I hate, as much as you do, the undesirables." He then launched into a vigorous statement for "real selective immigration or none at all." Applause followed this declaration. Mr. Davis continued that "now was the time for the selective system."

"Some business men believe in letting the bars down and getting all the cheap foreign labor they want.

"Far from it! Let 2,000,000 of them come into this country tomorrow and not more than 100,000 would be worthy of receiving our welcome; the rest would be parasites on our country. This campaign to get foreign labor, now under way, is simply to work us!"

The speaker told of his coming to America from Wales with his six brothers and sisters, accompanied by his father and mother. His father, he said, could not read or write. His parents came resolved to become good American citizens and secure work that they might bring up their children to be good Americans. Mr. Davis said children ought to remain in the public schools until they reach the age of 16 years. And yet we today allow millions of aliens to come into this country and "don't care a cuss what becomes of them!" (Applause).

Mr. Davis said the people from foreign lands who come here to seek freedom and new homes have no leaders to tell them what to do. It must be our duty to relieve them of the "leeches and parasites" that now beset them—strangers in a strange land. Out of 236 foreigners who came to Lucern, Penn., 12 years ago, only 20 were accepted by a court judge there for American citizenship, and that was 12 years ago. About all the men and women could say when asked questions was "We are married."

Mr. Davis believed, he said vigorously, in compulsory education. If that was the rule in America, there wouldn't be so many jail birds in the land today. Not long ago 200 criminals were shipped to this country and they got in without any trouble at all, he added. We have spent millions of dollars on prisons and jails in this country, and today, the secretary went on, 40 per cent of the nation's insane are aliens and only 27 per cent Americans. The cost to provide for these institutions amounts to just 30 per cent of all the taxes collected in New York.

"God helps those who help themselves, but America first!" shouted the secretary loudly amid prolonged applause.

Mr. Davis reviewed briefly what he termed the "greatest attempt ever known" now being made in the U.S.A. to break down the the present immigration laws. He cited the case of a foreign family being allowed to enter, but because one child was of unregistered birth, it was barred by Uncle Sam's officials at Ellis Island. The father had not taken the oath of allegiance, not thinking enough of America to do so. The birth occurred outside the three-mile limit. "But you can't stop babies!" added the secretary amid joyous laughter and applause.

Citing recent statistics in various industries, Mr. Davis said that out of one "block" of 94,004 workers, 13,407 were foreign-born. In a summary of 13,020,000 individuals, only 15,123 were checked as "superior." There were 3,325,435 of the total "very superior," 403,711 "fairly superior," and 1,116,211 with a "high average." Only 3,702,904 were marked "average," and 2,236,914 individuals were declared to be of "low average." One block of 4,287,573 were declared to be "inferior" and 2,660,262 "very inferior." In other words, the average was one good to five inferior in the 13 million catalogued intelligence survey.

Bootlegging in Immigration

"There is general bootlegging in immigration today on a par with liquor bootlegging," declared Secretary Davis. "They even come into this country in aeroplanes!"

He declared that civic righteousness must prevail in America if our civilization is to last. History shows that the average length of a successful civilization is only 500 years.

"We want to preserve our civilization—our priceless heritage!" said the speaker, vigorously, in closing. "If we don't preserve what we have and maintain our prestige hard-fought-for and well bought, there will be discontent and disaster and we shall be actually in a hell of a fix, with a brand of government over us all like Russia today!" (Applause).

The secretary closed by thanking the Rotarians, Mayor Donovan and the citizens of Lowell for their cordial reception and declared that his visit last evening to the new Memorial Auditorium "was a rare architectural and mental treat." He urged the citizens of Lowell to carry on the fight for selective immigration or none at all.

SECRETARY DAVIS GUEST AT ROTARIAN DINNER

Previous to coming Lowell yesterday afternoon, Secretary Davis was a guest earlier in the day of the Women's Republican club of Boston, where he delivered an address that was filled with interesting prophecies.

Upon arrival in this city escorted by Rotarian Harry G. Pollard, the cabinet member was conducted directly to Liberty hall in the Memorial Auditorium building, where the weekly dinner and meeting of the Rotarians was in full swing. The attendance of the business men of the city was never greater at any formal "weekly," and the appearance of Secretary of Labor Davis, a former member of Rotary, was the signal for an ovation.

President Parker introduced Secretary Davis in a few well chosen words, expressing the genuine pleasure of both the Rotarians and every citizen of Lowell in the pleasure of having the distinguished cabinet official present as a guest of the people of the municipality. The welcome was one that showed beyond question that he genuine good-fellowship and cordiality of the Rotarians had touched a warm spot in the Davis heart and he made no attempt to conceal his sincere pleasure at the vigorous acclaim that was tendered in lavish fashion by leading Lowell men who meant to make it emphatic.

Secretary Davis expressed his delight for the cordial reception tendered by the Rotary clubmen and guests. He praised the promoters and builders of the Memorial Auditorium, which he called the most beautiful institution of its kind in the country today. He had a good word to say for Rotary, referring in particular to the good work done by Rotarians in many cities and towns in aiding child life.

He told an appealing story of a pathetic case involving a 12-year-old boy in Atlanta, Ga., that brought tears to the eyes of the members. The boy had been found in a hovel, creeping about on all fours like a beast in the forest. The Rotarians of Atlanta took the boy to a hospital, provided for his requirements for several years, and today the "four-footed monster" is a graceful, upstanding young man, a credit to his community and with work to do in American citizenship fields. The story was touching in its compelling force and description of the methods of saving one human life from blank despair, ignominy and uselessness.

The secretary praised international Rotarians for "shelling out" good-fellowship, ready aid to the unfortunate and dispensing the spirit that revives, stimulates and makes good in the community. Rotary, he declared emphatically, "works for the other fellow always." It is "big work, with the accent on the big." The speaker praised Rotarians for being sympathetic. Such men are greatly needed today, he continued.

More than 40,000,000 men in America are gainfully employed today, Mr. Davis went on. They are all Americans. The duty of all good citizens is to keep those men employed in the future.

Speaking of his own duties in Washington, Mr. Davis said he always welcomed friendly criticism. "Write to me men," he said, "when you have anything on your minds. Offer me your suggestions at any time if things don't suit you in my department. Service is what counts and I am prepared to give you and all good Americans the very best service I can."

Mr. Davis praised Congressman Rogers, who he called "friend John," and declared that the Lowell representative at Washington has been "doing things" and will "do a great many more things for the good of the republic in the days to come." Applause greeted the reference to Mr. Rogers.

He told of his personal affection for the laboring men and women of the land and said he had once toiled without a chance to secure a good school education, and knows the condition of those who labor today and what they have to battle against under many heart-breaking conditions. He hoped, he said, that the Rotary club and the Lowell chamber of commerce will get back of all movements to improve the citizenship of the country in the interests of true Americanism and ideals always, and had no doubts about Lowell from the appearance of those who were handling his reception in Lowell last evening, he said in concluding his address to the Rotarians.

HOW TO SLEEP ON A BARE FLOOR

IT is more a matter of SLEEP, than of bed or board.

There is always a reason for sleeplessness. Usually, it is a "sour" stomach, a liver that has "lain down" on the job, congested bowels, or biliousness.

Then, just before retiring, take Beecham's Pills. They soothe an uneasy stomach, encourage the organs of digestion and elimination to natural activity, and assure restful sleep no matter what!

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 3.—Decision of a commission of medical experts, in session at Ellis island yesterday ordering Sammy Goldman, Syracuse schoolboy, deported to Rumania because of mental deficiency, came as a shock to the little refugee's mother and a surprise to the Americanization league, which since the lad's arrival two years ago had followed his progress at school with evident satisfaction.

Attorneys for the family and others interested in the case were prepared for any unfavorable decision, and it is their purpose, to stay the sentence of deportation until all court efforts are exhausted. A writ of habeas corpus was understood to be the first step contemplated by Atty. Ralph Shultman, counsel for the family; thence the case may be carried to the United States supreme court. The family now awaits the action of Secretary of Labor Davis on the medical experts' report.

The case of Sammy has attracted nationwide attention. His father is an American citizen. The citizenship papers include Sammy as an American citizen. The boy, born in Russia, was buffeted about by the storms of war and finally landed in Rumania. His teachers assert he has mastered the English language during his brief stay here and has proved to be bright in classroom work.

SPOKE AT WOMEN'S CLUB

Interesting Talk by Miss Nichols on "Small Pleasure" Gardens

Miss Rose Standish Nichols spoke before the Middlesex Women's club yesterday on "Small Pleasure Gardens" and illustrated her most interesting talk with lantern slides in black and white and in color. Gardens in England and Europe, especially those of Spain, were very beautiful, while pictures of smaller plots in our own New England added local interest to the subject.

The club has received an appeal through the literature department of the state federation for a donation of 500 books in the drive being made in the interest of the American Merchant Marine Library association. Mrs. Otis L. Humphrey, president, asked that books be donated and left either at the club rooms or at the public library.

During a brief business meeting the president announced the following committee to present a list of club officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. John K. Whittier, Mrs. E. B. Carney, Miss Julia T. Pevey, Mrs. Tyler A. Stevens, Mrs. S. H. Thompson and Mrs J. Harry Boardman.

RECONSTRUCTION OF DRACUT SCHOOL

Members of the recommending committee in connection with the reconstruction of the Parker Avenue school in Dracut, which was destroyed by fire a couple of weeks ago, held a public meeting at the Goodhue schoolhouse last evening for the purpose of receiving suggestions from the residents of the neighborhood. The meeting, which was presided over by Chairman Fred Bassett was largely attended and great interest was shown in the project of reconstruction.

Among the suggestions offered, and which were well received by the committee were the following: The erection of an eight-room house on the site of the old school. The laying out of an assembly hall in the new building. That the new building be of brick construction, and the seizure of the land adjoining the school for playground purposes. All these recommendations will be submitted to the voters of the town at a meeting to be held later. The members of the committee are Fred Bassett, chairman; Hon. John T. Sparks, Peter Bulton, William O'Malley and Philippe Legare.

WILL TALK ON THE CANADIAN NORTHWEST

An address on the Canadian Northwest by Rev. Alphonse Archambault, O.M.I., and a radio concert conducted by Arthur Roberge, were features of the meeting of the C.M.A.C. Literary club, which was held last evening in the assembly hall of the association in Pawtucket street.

President Leon Lamoureux occupied the chair and he introduced Rev. Fr. Archambault, a former missionary, who is now connected with St. Joseph's parish of this city. The reverend gentleman related his experiences with the natives of Fort Albany at Hudson bay and told of their mode of living and the hardships of missionaries in those regions. His remarks were very interesting. At the close of the address Mr. Roberge gave his radio concert, which included numbers from Montreal, Schenectady and other points. The program was very enjoyable.

THE "LOWELL DAY" THESIS CONTEST

Students of the eighth and ninth grades of the grammar schools throughout the city competed in the preliminary contest today, for the Lowell day thesis, "How Can We Make Our Streets Safe for School Children." The winners of today's contest will be eligible to take part in the final one to be held next Friday. The prize for the best essay is a Hamilton watch.

The judges have been selected and are Miss Helen Hogan, a member of the faculty of the State Normal school; Morton Sturtevant, head of the English department of the high school; and Major Walter Joyes, supervisor of safety instruction of the schools of the city.

CADETS TO GO TO SEA

NEW YORK, April 3.—Junior Naval Reserve cadets are to have opportunity this summer to gain sea experience in a practical way. Arrangements have been made with a steamship line crossing the Pacific to accept cadets for training, and the young men will be paid regular wages while at sea.

The Admiral Oriental Line, of Seattle, Washington, will carry three cadets in the engineering department on each of its five passenger steamers. One cadet will be selected from New York; the other 11 from Reserve Units on the Pacific coast. The Merchants and Miners Transportation Line, of Philadelphia, has taken on Naval Reserve cadets in the past and will do so again this summer. It prefers the cadets to boys who have had no training.

KILLS HER TWO CHILDREN AND ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

NEW YORK, April 3.—Mrs. Rose Martelli of the Bronx, yesterday cut the throats of her three and four-year-old son and daughter and then slashed her own. The children died. The mother is under arrest at Fordham hospital.

Neighbors discovered the tragedy when, attracted by the odor of escaping gas, they forced the door of the Martelli apartment.

The woman, police believe, called the children into the kitchen separately and killed them. She later took the bodies into the bedroom and after turning on the gas, lay down beside them and cut her own throat.

NEW-COMER TO THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Charles E. Whelan, former superintendent of the local division of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company, today opened a real estate and insurance office in room 326 of Central block, 53 Central street. For a number of years he has been interested in this line of work, has had good experience in giving sales advice, appraising properties and handling real estate transactions large and small in various New England districts.

During the two years that he held down the street railway berth in this city, Mr. Whelan formed many real friendships and the new real estate offices opened this morning were visited during the day by numerous well-wishers eager to extend best wishes to the former street railway superintendent.

Mr. Whelan says that property in and about Lowell today is more desirable than ever before and he is prepared to give prompt service at all times in aiding buyers to find what they desire. Property appraisals will also be handled at the Whelan office, besides a general line of modern insurance business of many ramifications and desirability. The Whelan motto over the executive offices is "Service in Real Estate."

HOW SECRETARY DAVIS WON SUCCESS

Secretary Davis who spoke at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon is a very remarkable man, because of the manner in which he arose to prominence and educated himself through his virility of character and his knack of concentrating upon the work in hand.

Brought here from Wales by his parents as one of six children in 1886, when he was but eight years of age, his opportunities for schooling were almost negligible. His parents having settled in Pittsburgh, young Davis was sent to work as an iron puddler when 11 years old, and attracted attention by the enthusiasm with which he attacked every task set before him. Put to work at that early age, it would seem that his education and his life prospects were to be neglected and that for him there was no hope of rising to prominence in any direction but young Davis was not the kind of a boy that would plod along in a rut. Yet he never slighted the work in hand. Indeed his success was mainly due to his determination to excel in everything he undertook. Whether the nature of his work was good or bad, easy or difficult, agreeable or otherwise, he concentrated his energies upon doing it well. That is one of the surest roads to success. If a man is a bootblack, let him try to be the best bootblack in his neighborhood and he will get the trade.

Success came to Davis because he made his opportunities where boys without ambition would sink out of sight and be submerged in the millions that spend their lives at the base of the hill so to speak. Not all boys could accomplish what Davis did. There is more prejudice against boys of foreign nativity now than there was in those days. But the boy who keeps a single task in mind, who devotes his time and energies to that alone, will eventually rise to the height to which his talent will carry him.

It is true that environment has much to do with shaping the career of young men; but what environment could be more unfavorable than that in which a boy moves who works in a steel mill. Let it be admitted that Secretary Davis must have been endowed with more than average talent and what he possessed he used to the best advantage; but there are hundreds, perhaps, we might say thousands, of boys in this city who are equally gifted but who waste their energies in scattered effort, in pursuit of vain pleasures, in gambling or some other frivolity by which attention is diverted from the things that are really important. Secretary Davis, now a member of President Harding's cabinet, is a type of self-made man whose success may well be an inspiration to boys who become discouraged unless they are pushed into some nice job in which they will not have to soil their fingers. These artificial aids are of very little importance; and a boy who has the necessary grit had better dispense with them and stand on his own merits like James J. Davis, always ready to face hard work and to apply his skill and energy to the task set before him with indomitable courage and persistence. That is what counts in striving for success and it is what lifted James J. Davis from the position of puddler in a steel mill to a seat in the United States Cabinet.

YOUNG MAN STAY NORTH

Some statements recently made by prominent authorities would indicate that the prevailing opinion that the South offers advantages for cotton manufacturing is not founded upon facts. President Robert Amory of the National Cotton Manufacturers association states that while the South has many advantages over New England as a cotton manufacturing centre, most of these he holds are merely temporary. He declares that from a financial standpoint the New England cotton industry shows that over a given period of time New England mill stocks have proved to be a good investment. He points out that the South has to earn from $4 to $6 per spindle to show the same rate of earnings on its capital as the northern mills. If given a fair show in respect to legislation, he says he has no fear for the stability of New England as a cotton manufacturing locality. That is an encouraging statement from a man who knows.

Dr. Donald P. Armstrong, executive of the national health council of New England, before the chamber of commerce in Boston last week, made the plain statement that manufacturers who leave New England to start mills in the South are making a mistake. "In the production of cotton goods," says Dr. Armstrong, "is it better to pay high wages to a group of workers, not more than 2 per cent of whom are ill at any time, or is it better to take a chance with low wages in a malaria and hook-worm ridden southern population with a 10 per cent continuous illness rate and the coincident low production, inefficiency, and time lost?

If the health index is at all a safe guide, the former represent the best investment. The message to the young New England business men today, at least until southern hygienic conditions imporve, might well be, "Young man stay North."

There is sound advice and it applies more particularly to the millmen who seem to think the South is a sort of Utopia. When they build in the South they are anchored there, whereas, if a mill operative goes there to find unhealthy conditions, he can return to New England to escape the hook-worm.

TO STABILIZE THE DOLLAR

Dr. Henry Chandler, economist of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, declares that the immediate strengthening of our monetary policy is a matter of urgent necessity. In support of his argument he claims that not since the world broke away from the gold standard, has the money of the United States had a mooring that could be confidently relied upon to keep its value within a range of fluctuation consistent with sound business. He says that we are in danger of another permanent fall in the value of money unless the business leaders join with the bankers in supporting a policy strictly in accord with sound business development.

What Mr. Chandler means by a fall in the value of money can be illustrated in a practical way by comparing what a ten dollar bill will buy in a grocery store today with what it would purchase some years ago. We find the purchasing power of the dollar declining, or in other words, there is an inflation of the currency. Our money purchases less and as a result wages must increase in order that the working people may be able to live. When this inflation reaches a climax, there may come a turn in the tide and depreciation set in. That would reduce values as reckoned in dollars and cents and would cause more serious alarm. Dr. Chandler points out that to business in general much of the apparent prosperity accompanying a rapidly falling value of money is often little more than a paper prosperity. The large profit and surpluses which are apparently being accumulated often shrink into nothing during the exaggerated reaction that inevitably follows a period of previous activity. He also states that much of the extraordinary labor difficulties occurring recently is a direct result of the price dislocations caused by the fall in the value of money. "The course that will contribute most to the prevention of unusual labor difficulties, therefore, is for business men to bend their influence to a conservation of the present value of money." To attain this end, Dr. Chandler favors a new system of maintaining stability in the value of the dollar.

There is no doubt whatever that Dr. Chandler thus issues timely warning against fluctuations of the currency that will cause great business disturbance and dislocation of values to an extent that will result in many failures and more or less paralysis of business. Dr. Chandler refers only to a tendency that is already considered dangerous but the evil effects of which may be averted by the adoption of his timely advice.

The price of anthracite drops to $17 per ton in Lawrence. It is not long since anthracite was being sold for a higher price than that both in Lawrence and Lowell. But when it was put to the test it was found to be unburnable. The price of anthracite in Lowell is $16.50, with most of the dealers, and in the present state of the market, that is not an unreasonable figure for first quality coal; but it is too much for the anthracite that is half slate and stone.

The High School Masters' club has come out in favor of eliminating professional coaches in school athletics and substituting teacher coaches who will be directly responsible to the principals of their schools.

There may be some reason for desiring such a change, possibly in the interests of discipline, but certainly not as a means of improving school athletics. This is an age of specialization, and it would be very difficult to find in the faculty of any particular school a man competent to coach football or baseball teams as efficiently as one who is well trained to the business and who has attained distinction in leading such teams to victory.

We note that the Cambridge school committee has voted to abolish the position of teacher-coach at the Cambridge high and Latin and the Rindge technical schools. Hereafter the position of coach of both schools will be entirely separate from the teacher's duty. Mentors, or coaches, will be chosen by the school committee for each sport. Whether this will be an improvement will depend entirely upon whether the new coaches will be superior to the men who will be dropped. It would seem that if a man is to be employed as teacher, his time will be badly broken up if he has to serve as coach for teams in football, and possibly in other sports. Moreover, it is not improbable that if the coaching of such teams was to be done exclusively by teachers, we might find some very poor sticks in charge of the teams. The man who is known to be a specialist in any given sport is the one who will inspire his team with enthusiasm and courage. The great strides made in school athletics during the past few years would seem to call for coaches who have specialized in the various sports to an extent greater than would be practical for the average teacher.

WAGE SETTLEMENTS

It is gratifying to find that the wage question in the textile industries is likely to be settled through conferences between employers and employed and without any strikes or other disturbances that would interfere with the present prospect of improved business. We have had too many strikes and too many conflicts over wages and working conditions and if the state fails to do its duty in providing machinery which will enable the interested parties to reach equitable decisions on wage disputes, then it is up to the employers and their operatives to settle questions for themselves in their own way. This calls for compromise on both sides and unless the matters at issue be approached in that spirit, there will be continual conflict to the detriment of business in general and serious loss to all concerned.

We can see the effect of such continuous warfare on wage questions in the shoe cities of Haverhill and Lynn. A large number of the shops in those cities do not work more than half time, and the reason is that either the manufacturers do not want to pay fair wages or the unions are not satisfied with the wages the employers can afford to pay. Some of the people in the shoe cities where arbitration contracts are not in force, would be glad to find an opportunity elsewhere that would afford steady employment even at a much lower wage.

BOOM AHEAD

Times are going to be good, for the rest of the year at least, predicts the conservative and able Harvard Economic Service. Its economic "background" is the last word in scientific statistics.

Another wise authority is Benjamin M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National bank of New York. He says the sound and prudent business man "will be very conservative in paying out dividends or in taking profits out of the business. He will seek to conserve profits and to enlarge the surplus as a buffer against future shocks." This is a good lead to follow by the average man in business.

The occupation of the Rhineland by the allied armies since the armistice will cost Germany 1200 million dollars, an amount that would leave a big hole in the reparations assessed against her. That is why Germany holds out and will hold out as long as she can against France in the Ruhr.

It seems a rather strange commentary upon the progress of our girls in domestic science when Francis E. Day, a high school senior, wins prize offered by the state of Massachusetts in a breadmaking contest. How did he do it? Simply by experimenting until he found the way to make the best bread.

Boston Globe: Those in Washington who have been explaining that the administration is blameless in the situation which developed during the past winter with regard to coal in New York and New England get cold comfort from the retiring Fuel Commissioner of New York state, Gen. George W. Goethals.

Gen. Goethals, who brings the mind of an eminent engineer to bear upon the fuel famine, does not mince matters as to who was to blame. "Imagine Teddy down there on that proposition!" he urges, referring to Washington's policy of watchful psychologizing. "The federal government organized a fuel administration which had no authority." "If you want anything done, you have got to put a man in charge equal to his responsibility." "It is the job of the national government." A commission, he avows, referring to the interstate commerce commission, is a board, and "a board is something that is long, narrow and that never acts." The administration's lack of activity in dealing with the fuel famine Gen. Goethals attributes to "political cowardice." "Congress is to blame for this, and perhaps the man at the top. But, O! for the big stick," is his parting shot.

"God forgive me if I ever take a job like this one again," he exclaims, voicing the wrath of a trained engineering mind after its experience with national politicians. His comment on the mishandling of the fuel crisis will be echoed approvingly wherever folks who were lately shivering stoop to pick the shale from their grates.

The Manila Carnival

Philippine Herald: Today the Manila carnival opens its doors to the public. To celebrate its 11th anniversary, the Philippine Herald issues a special edition devoted exclusively to enterprise, progress, trade, expansion, manufacturing and agricultural development.

We have always considered the Manila carnival as a national institution. The merriment and the revelry that go with it are mere incidents. It is the commercial and industrial fair that is the important feature, and it is this phase that makes of this annual festivity a national institution and a potent power for good.

It is our desire to lay special stress on this particular side of the Manila carnival with the end in view of inviting the attention of the people to the economic development and needs of the Philippine Islands. We are publishing today this special edition in the hope that it will serve the purpose for which it is intended, which is, to bring up the country's economical development into the foretront of our national problems.

A Thought

The objects that we have known in better days are the main props that sustain the weight of our affections, and give us strength to await our future lot.—William Hazlitt.

Loving Identification

"But, madam, you will have to be identified before I can cash this check for you," said the paying teller. "O, I just hate to do it, and George would be dreadfully angry," declared the fair caller, blushing furiously, "but I have a love letter here which describes me fully, if you would care to see it."

Very Clever Trick

Two newsboys were discussing a proposition. "You say you kin git into the picture show?" "Sure kin." "How?" "By sneaking through the exit." "But what if the boss is looking?" "You walks in backwards. Then, if the boss happens to be looking, you're just coming out."

Had Trouble Enough

A delegation had called on Jones to get him to serve on the house committee of the country club. "Gentlemen, I thank you for the honor from the bottom of my heart, but there is nothing doing. I already have a wife, a son-in-law and a second-hand car, and I think that is trouble enough for one man."

Kiss Vs. Bacon

A young married couple engaged a pretty cook. But her cooking was terrible. On the first morning after her arrival the bacon was burned to a cinder. "Darling," said the wife, "I'm afraid cook's burned the bacon. You'll have to be satisfied with a kiss for breakfast. "All right," said the husband, gruffly, "call her in."

Breaking Rule

"This is your dime, sir," said the haughty waitress, "we are not allowed to take tips here." The customer frowned. "I am aware of that fact," he said, "but I thought you would be glad to have me break the rule, since it is in your interest." "Not with a dime," the girl exclaimed. "Breakin' a rule with a dime is only adding insult to injury."

Very Self-Willed

She was a very self-willed little girl and a teacher at her school asked in despair: "Rose, would you mind telling whether you ever do what you're told?" The maid gave the question her serious attention for a moment, and then replied that she was not sure. "But," she added with the cheerful air of one offering an excellent substitutes, "I nearly always do what I want."

Capitol Jokes

U. S. ex-Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen from New Jersey has a favorite story and this is what he says about it: "I have used this story many times as an opening for my addresses when I have been preceded by one of these long-winded introducers. A criminal was about to be hanged for murder. During almost all of the day before and right up to the minute set for the execution, a minister had been trying to get the man to repent. But he was a hard-boiled murderer and wouldn't do it. He even grew impatient. Just as the trap was about to be sprung, he turned to the sheriff and said: 'Sheriff, I wanta thank you. You've been very fair with me.' And to the hangman he said: 'I ain't holdin' no grudge against you, either. You treated me fine and you gotta hang people to make a livin'. But as for you,' and he turned to the minister, 'I'll see you—later!' "

A Garden Tragedy

The potato and the pumpkin lived together many years,
Yet I know the way they quarreled has already reached your ears.

While the way that pumpkin ran about was anything but right.

Sometimes he ran all over the proud potato's plot,
There didn't seem to be any place where he was not.

The potato peeked and squinted till he turned all into eyes
To see that puffed-up pumpkin grow to such enormous size.

His only consolation was, when after thought, he said:

MUST REORGANIZE TO SAVE CONCERN

At a meeting of stockholders, creditors and other parties interested in the affairs of the Inter-City Trust concern, now in litigation, in Boston yesterday, before Judge Morton of the United States court, no future plans were decided upon for the conduct of the business, although it was announced that the concern must be reorganized or it will lose its extensive real estate holdings in Lowell and other cities.

Two plans were submitted yesterday, the first by W. Edward Elmer, which proposed the taking over of all of the property as it is and retaining it on a chain basis and pay all the court expenses up to the present time. The second plan proposed was the purchase of the Blake park mortgage in Brookline and disposal of the other pieces as best they can.

Unless some plan preventing the foreclosure of the present mortgages and which will meet with the approval of Judge Morton is made by Monday next, all of the people who have invested money in the project started by the Inter-City trust are likely to lose all the money they have put into the plan.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

A few weeks ago the death of Girard P. Dadman, a former city clerk, was published in the local papers and attracted comparatively little attention, although Mr. Dadman for a great many years had been prominent in local politics and had held the office of city clerk under both republican and democratic administrations for nearly a score of years. He was a very efficient city clerk and although a staunch republican always, he was never accused of being unfair to the opposite party. Under the old charter, David Chase held the position of auditor perhaps longer than Mr. Dadman occupied the office of city clerk and there never was a man, at least in those days, more familiar with city finances than was Mr. Chase. Similarly it might be said that Mr. Dadman was quite familiar with everything that came within the sphere of his duties and he was a recognized authority upon all matters connected with the city clerk's office. For a number of years before his death he had been in failing health and most of the republican workers with whom he had been associated had passed away. There was one, however, whose friendship for Mr. Dadman had never waned. That gentleman was Arthur Salmon and it was he who voluntarily took charge of the funeral and communicated with the out-of-town relatives of deceased regarding the burial. Mr. Salmon's friendship for Mr. Dadman showed the loyalty of a true and unflinching friend, one whose good offices were ever active, especially when they were most needed. Such friendship, lasting through the turmoil of the years, through weal and woe, is very rare indeed, and it is one of the things that make life worth living and that nurture sweet memories that never die.

LOCAL CLERGYMAN PRAISES COLIN O'MORE

Relative to Colin O'More's second appearance at the Memorial Auditorium on Thursday night of this week, the following excerpts from a letter received by the manager from Rev. Karl P. Meister of the Centralville M. E. church is of interest at this time:

"The singing of Mr. O'More was human and understandable. His personality was most pleasing. Every moment of the entertainment was one of real pleasure and helpfulness. His rendering of 'My Jesus is Near' and 'Where'er You Walk' has not been surpassed.

"The playing of Emilie Knox was superb. She puts all her personality into the music. I shall not easily forget either of these artists.

"Sincerely yours,
"KARL P. MEISTER."

Mr. Meister heard Colin O'More in Lowell on Feb. 11 and was much impressed and has kindly permitted Mr. Linehan to publish his letter of congratulation. The above is one of many such complimentary things said of Mr. O'More after his first appearance here.

INGROWN TOE NAIL TURNS OUT ITSELF

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

TO MY LAUNDRY

My collar edges saw my neck
And cut me somewhat jaggedly,
My underwear comes back a wreck,
My sox you launder raggedly:
And though to wear such garments hurts
I'll stand the holes you cut in them,
But kindly do not pin my shirts
And kindly do not button them!

I must remove each pin with care
Before my shirts I don again,
Each one I must unbutton, ere
I ever put it on again;
Oh, starch my garments till it hurts
And pains me to be shut in them,
But kindly do not pin my shirts
And kindly do not button them!

Fold them as often as you will
And doll them up expensively;
It's useless, but I'll pay the bill
Nor murmur too extensively.
It is, perhaps, my just deserts
That I feel like t mutt in them,
But please, oh, please don't pin my shirts,
And please, oh, please don't button them.

C. Y. M. L. WILL HOLD SPECIAL MEETING

A special meeting of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will be held in the Lyceum rooms, Suffolk street, next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of considering a change in the constitution as it exists at the present time. According to the tenets of the laws now in vogue, the board of directors consists of eight members elected by popular vote and seven appointed by the spiritual director. By the substitution of the proposed change, the board of directors will still consist of 15 members, but the seven appointees by the spiritual director will be done away with and the same number elected by popular vote, making the entire membership of the board a duly elected body. If the plan goes through, and it is generally believed that it will, the directors will then have the authority to elect a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and an advisory board of three.

It is expected that a large number of old and new members will be present at Sunday's meeting to voice their opinion on the proposed change, which is regarded as the best and most democratic constitution possible.

BOY INSTANTLY KILLED BY AUTO

MARBLEHEAD, April 3.—Philip Obeo, 8, who boarded at 22 Curtis street, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon while playing on Pleasant street, when struck by an auto owned and operated by Edward Pileau of 15 Green street. Witnesses say that the child ran in front of the car.

Philip was the son of Frank F. Obeo of 40 Rockview avenue, Jamaica Plain.

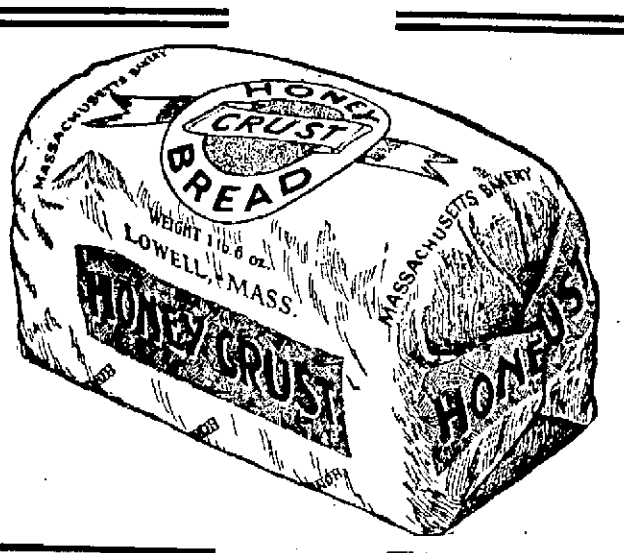

Pileau picked the lad up and took him to Dr. P. L. Sanborn's office nearby, where he was pronounced dead. Medical Examiner Frank Atwood of Salem viewed the body and found death due to a fractured skull.

The police arrested Pileau and released him in $500 bail. An inquest will be held April 17.

LOCK JEWELER IN CLOSET, TAKE $8000 IN GEMS

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 3.—Hugo Riddell of Providence, proprietor of the Pawtucket Jewelry exchange here, was locked in a closet at his place of business late yesterday, by two young men, who selected jewelry valued at $8000 and left.

"What do you value your life at?" one of the men asked Riddell, presenting a pistol. Then the two forced him into the closet. He was released some minutes later when his cries were heard by a patient leaving the office of a dentist next door.

The robbers made their selection of diamonds, rings and watches in a few seconds. Riddell said that a young woman who visited the place Saturday and again yesterday had given them accurate information.

NEW SYSTEM ON CRIMINAL CASES

BOSTON, April 3.—A new system in regard to the trial of criminal cases went into effect yesterday, at the Middlesex criminal court at East Cambridge.

District Attorney Arthur K. Reading issued a statement in which he said "that it has always been the rule that criminal cases should take precedence over civil cases. That rule has not been lived up to, and in the past, lawyers have been granted continuances of criminal cases on the grounds that they are engaged in a civil matter. That will no longer be accepted as an excuse for the continuance of a criminal case.

"The district attorney said "that in the future, instead of allowing continuances on criminal cases which have been marked for trial, the principals in these cases will be defaulted unless they are in court when their cases are called."

Yesterday morning, out of 21 cases called, 15 principals and 11 sureties were recorded as defaulted. Of these three are Lowell liquor cases.

MOVE TO HAVE ALL EGGS STAMPED

LONDON, April 3.—Every egg sold in England will be stamped with the country of origin, if the plans of various housewives' organizations to put such a bill through parliament are successful.

Much interest has been aroused in London recently by the declaration of the national poultry council that only about ten per cent of the eggs sold as new laid eggs come from the provinces of England. It has been shown that huge quantities of eggs are shipped into England every year from Holland, China and Egypt, are mixed with other eggs, and sold as native eggs. Because the foreign eggs are of a better color and larger than English eggs, it is said the retailers are able to sell them more readily than English eggs.

RECORD IN BUILDING

PORTLAND, Me., April 3.—Building operations in this city during the year ending Mar. 31, costing $3,264,404, and the number of permits, 1119, were greater than in any year since the building inspector's office was established, Inspector Charles A. Hanson reported yesterday.

Not a new brick dwelling was erected, but 234 were built of wood. Garages led all other classes, with 259 of wood.

The analysis of the month's imports, which had a total value of $293,464,000 as announced yesterday, made the following comparisons:

Definite plans for this work were decided upon at a meeting of the club at 295 Market street last night at which the president, Constantine S. Dukakis, presided. John Constantinou, formerly professor at the American College at Smyrna and now a resident of Boston and Dr. John Gatsopoulos of Lowell, both spoke on the necessity of aid for the stricken people of Asia Minor.

PENNANT TO BE PRESENTED

Presentation to Take Place at Lowell-All-Star Game This Evening

The 1922-1923 pennant, won by Lowell in competition with Worcester in the series which terminated a week ago tonight, will be formally presented to the champions at the Crescent rink tonight, when the first game of a series between the title winners and Bill Duggan's All-Stars will be played.

Mayor Donovan has been invited to attend tonight's game and formally hand over the emblem to Capt. Harkins and his crew and the presentation is bound to prove a most pleasing incident for local polo fans.

A large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the presentation. A delegation from Woburn, home of Capt. Harkins, will come over the road to participate in the event, and needless to say they will come armed with horns, bells, etc., to accord recognition to their townsman. The Woburn fans are elated over Harkins' success in landing his third pennant for Lowell and all season long many from that city have come to Lowell regularly to witness the games.

The coming competition is expected to be one of the greatest treats in polo history, arranged as a climax to a most successful local season. Duggan has surrounded himself with a great combination, one of the best possible to obtain.

Like other all star outfits this one will not only possess individual luminaries, but will have three men who have played together virtually all season, and this fact will greatly increase the team's effectiveness. Duggan Dufresne and Gardner, all of the New Bedford team, a trio understanding each other perfectly, a combination that knows how to get the best results with the minimum of effort is the nucleus of the team. Added to these are Steve Pierce, star second rush of the Worcester team and one of the best in this position in the business, and Bill Blount the classy goal tender of the Providence team.

Lowell will depend on the line-up that was good enough to bring the championship to the city. Kid Williams and Bob Hart will be on the rush line, Ferdie Harkins at center, "Molly" Morrison at halfback and Bill Jette, goal.

In addition to the interest in the games themselves there is going to be added interest in the Duggan-Williams feud. In the recent New Bedford-Lowell series a contest between these two stars to determine the champion rusher and goal scorer resulted in Williams carrying off the honors, 74 to 47. Dugan was dissatisfied with the result, and he promises to turn the tables on the Lowell flash in the coming battles. He has requested that the scorer to be posted at the center to score the races to the spot and his request will be granted.

CLEVELAND DEPENDS ON WORK OF RECRUITS

By N. E. A. Service

LAKELAND, Fla., April 3—George Metevier and "Dan" Boone are the two recruit pitchers Speaker is banking on to come through for him.

Both pitchers received a brief trial with the Indians last year, and showed enough to warrant the belief they would come through.

Metevier and Boone are right handers, Boone coming from Chattanooga in the Southern Association and Metevier from Jersey City in the International league.

Boone is the tallest man on the Cleveland staff. His most effective ball is his fast one, which takes a peculiar dip, much after the manner of Ernie Shore's fast ball when he starred with the Boston Americans.

Few pitchers boast such a ball. It is a delivery peculiar to tall pitchers who use a side-arm motion. Such a style gets a dip on the fast ball.

The success of Pillette of the Detroit club, who was the sensation of the American league last season was due to such a style fast ball.

Shore, Boone and Pillette are fellows who go close to 6 feet 3 inches in height.

Metevier has a nice change of pace, a good curve and a fair fast ball. He also knows how to pitch.

COLD WEATHER HOLDS UP SCHOOL BASEBALL

Continued cold weather has made its presence known at the high school by making it impossible for candidates for the baseball team to get out-of-doors practice. Up to the present time only battery candidates have been given a work-out, and they cannot get the practice they need indoors as the light is not adequate for speed pitching. Coach Liston plans to call out candidates for other positions on the first warm day and expects over 100 boys to answer his call. The first scheduled game is to be played on April 19. Just as soon as he gets his baseball team going, Coach Liston will call out candidates for the football squad for spring training.

Physical Director Donald MacIntyre is also being kept back in his plans for a freshman baseball league by the cold weather. Faculty Manager Conway is making up a schedule for the freshman team but this will not be ready for a week or more.

No further action has been taken towards forming a golf team among high school students but this will also take definite form soon.

NATIONAL INDOOR TENNIS TITLE

NEW YORK, April 3.—Doubles play for the national indoor tennis title was the major feature of today's program of the annual tournament which reached the fourth round in singles yesterday with the elimination of the last of the five foreign entrants.

Frank T. Anderson of Brooklyn, 1917-18 champion, one of the seeded six, was to play the two singles matches scheduled today, the first, a second round contest with Jack I. Linderman. The winner will meet Frederick Dumrau.

RED SOX INFIELD NOT YET SETTLED

BOSTON, April 3.—The Red Sox will leave their Hot Springs (Ark.) training camp today for Little Rock, where their exhibition tour will open this afternoon with the Little Rock club. Manager Frank Chance and his men expressed few regrets in parting with the scene of their early season workout.

The Red Sox infield is not settled yet, reports from Hot Springs say, because constant bad weather and a poor playing field gave little opportunity for testing the players' ability. Chance said his men were in good condition and would probably work with more spirit in other surroundings.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., the Braves idled yesterday owing to a storm. It was the first day in two training seasons at St. Petersburg that the club had lost a day because of rain. The Braves will meet Cleveland today in the second and last game of the spring series between the clubs. The Indians won the first on Saturday in Lakeland.

Cubs Have Gone Stale

CHICAGO, April 3.—Not a single day's practice was lost by the Chicago Nationals during their stay on the California coast, making them the most fortunate and at the same time the most unfortunate team in the league. The fact is, it was reported here the Cubs have had so much practice without rest that they have gone stale. That was given as the reason for the loss of a half dozen games at San Francisco and Oakland, last week. The Cubs on route back east, play at El Paso today.

Signs Life Contract

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—Ray Schmandt, infielder for the Brooklyn Nationals and Miss Estelle Overmann, were married here yesterday. Schmandt resides in St. Louis.

Hasty to Take Bride

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—Kellar Hasty, pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, tomorrow will marry Miss Wilma Elizabeth Butler of Marietta, Ga., says an announcement from there. Hasty arrived here with his club yesterday to play an exhibition game with the Cincinnati Reds.

Indians to Play Braves

CLEVELAND, Ohio April 3.—For the first time this season the Cleveland Indians were forced to remain idle because of rain. A game scheduled yesterday between the Indians and Lakeland, of Florida State league, was postponed until tomorrow.

The Indians go to St. Petersburg today to meet the Boston Braves in the last game scheduled with National League clubs.

Yankees Beat Robins

NEW YORK, April 3.—The Yankees climbed into the winning column in their exhibition series with the Brooklyn Robins capturing the game at Meridian, Miss., yesterday, 13 to 9.

The American champions were in hitting form, gathering 16 safeties. Three of them were from Babe Ruth's bat. The big fellow had a triple, a double and a single to his credit.

Rain prevented the scheduled Giants-White Sox game at Fort Worth, Tex.

Pirates Off For Tulsa

PITTSBURGH, April 3.—The majority of the players of the Pittsburgh National League club, will leave Hot Springs, Ark., tonight for Tulsa, Okla., where they will meet the Western league team of that place in games Wednesday and Thursday. A small squad of recruits will be left at Hot Springs for further training. From Tulsa, the Pirates will go on a barnstorming tour.

In yesterday's final intra-club game, which the Regulars won, 12 to 3, Russell and Carey knocked home runs and Leavitt, former Brown university star, got two triples.

PRO STARS TOUT JOHNNY FARRELL

Keep your eye on Johnny Farrell. That is the word that is being passed around by the crack golfers of the country.

There are many who believe the 21-year-old youngster, who is the pro at the Quaker Ridge club in New York will surely displace eGne Sarazen as the golfing sensation.

In 55 matches with the leading professionals of the country, Sarazen and Hutchison were only defeated five times on their recent tour. This gives some idea of the opposition Barnes and Farrell presented. In one of the matches the winners were eight up.

"Farrell is the most brilliant young golfer in the country. He has a chance of being a much talked about young man at the end of the summer's play."

WILL WHIP TEAM INTO SHAPE

Coach James Liston of the high school baseball team expects to call out his team on Thursday of this week, if the weather continues warm. Spaulding Park is still heavily laden with ice in shaded sections and he will have to use either Scollay Park or the South common. Unless the squad is called out this week, Coach Liston will have but little opportunity to pick either a fielding or a batting team. The schedule calls for an opening game on April 19 and that is but two weeks away.

Coach Arthur Lynch of the freshman ball players intends to take his men up to the South common tomorrow if the weather permits. The schedule for the freshmen team is not yet made up but he wants to have a good team formed at about the same time the varsity team takes the field.

Can Battering Ruth Come Back?

By BILLY EVANS

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 3.—Can Babe Ruth come back?

What are the chances of Ruth to regain the home-run crown that is now the property of Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals?

For several days I have been giving the "Sultan of Swat" the once over, the up and down, trying to decide that very question.

If the hitting of home runs merely depends upon condition, Ruth has a great chance to win back the fame and glory that was his for three years.

I had heard much about Ruth's condition prior to hitting this burg, but was skeptical as to the reports.

Ruth Weighs 201 Pounds

How much had Ruth actually lost during the winter on the farm and the preliminary work at Hot Springs, Ark? I wanted to get the information first-hand and had the big fellow step on the scales. He tipped the beam at exactly 201 pounds.

Last season Ruth weighed 235 pounds. Draw on your imagination and it is an easy matter to picture the change that has taken place. The waistline has been reduced at least six inches, and the hay-window that once announced the approach of the Babe is now conspicuously missing.

Ruth is lighter and in better shape today than I have ever seen him during his entire connection with the American league. When he was the leading southpaw of the Johnsonian organization, Ruth weighed in the neighborhood of 210.

Ruth is in fine shape. He is working hard to keep his condition. Ruth is more than anxious to win back the exalted position he once held in the eyes of fandom. He feels keenly his failure of last season.

As to Ruth's condition I am perfectly satisfied the big fellow never was in better shape.

As to his ability to come back, well, that is another question.

I am of the opinion that Ruth's comeback depends on something more than mere condition. Psychology is going to play an even greater part.

If Ruth gets away to a good start, it will mean everything to him in an effort to win back popular favor.

Must Regain Confidence

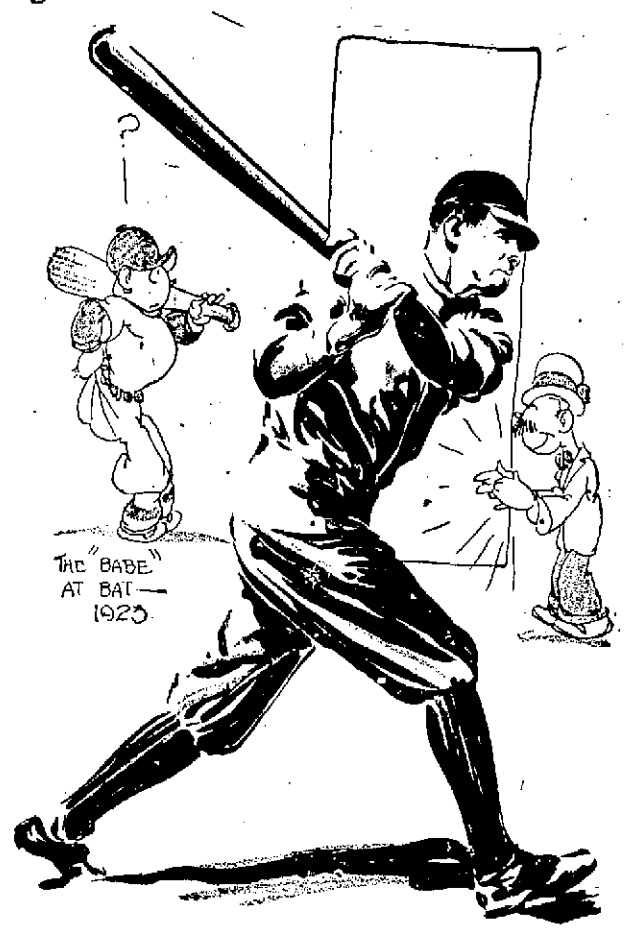

Mob psychology is going to enter into the affair to a great extent. In a sense, Ruth has lost confidence in himself. Once that was his greatest asset.

Ruth, when he was breaking home-run records, feared no pitcher, they all looked alike to him. Every pitcher had a wholesome respect for Ruth. He was the big threat.

That condition has been changed. Ruth's failure of last year has caused the pitchers to lose much of the respect they once had for Babe's batting prowess. Ruth looks no different than the other good hitters. No longer is he looked on as a super-batsman. That makes a difference.

Ruth is well aware that fandom is fickle. A good start means he will win back the cheers instead of jeers. Cheers make for confidence. Failure to hit at the start will unquestionably discourage the big fellow and probably kill off some of his worthwhile resolutions.

Ruth has won back condition. Now if he can get the fans with him, American league pitchers may once more tremble when he steps into the batter's box.

DETROIT CASTOFFS STAR AFTER JOINING REDS

Jim Roberts, a big, husky pitcher, who is trying for a berth on the Cincinnati staff, has a fine chance to come through if precedent means anything.

The precedent is that Jim Roberts for a couple of months was a member of the Detroit team and was sent back to the minors without any strings on him.

Detroit castoffs have been unusually successful with the Cincinnati club.

Babe Pinelli, who failed to impress Detroit as a third sacker, and was sent back to the coast, got his third big league trial with Dukes, and now is rated one of the best players in the National league at that position.

Johnny Couch, who had a big year in 1922, and who by his great work kept the Reds in the race during the early part of the season, had his first big league opportunity with Detroit and was sent back.

George Harper, who, the Reds say, is one of the best hitters in the National league, was carried for a couple of seasons by Jennings when he was in charge of Detroit, but finally turned loose as lacking big league class.

Cobb, when he played in the Winter Coast league, was favorably impressed by Caveney, who starred at short for the Reds last year. He offered a fancy price for him but finally decided Caveney wasn't worth the money asked and quit bidding in favor of the Reds.

Ball players, always superstitious, are inclined to feel that Roberts' failure to make good at Detroit means that he will surely deliver for Cincinnati.

FOR NORTH AND SOUTH AMATEUR TOURNEY

PINEHURST, N. C., April 3.—The 16 golfers who are to participate in the championship round in the annual North & South amateur tournament will be known tonight at the conclusion of the second day of the qualifying round which began yesterday.

Unless he shows an amazing reversal of form, Henry J. Topping of Greenwich, the 1922 champion, will not get an opportunity to defend his laurels. He was 40th on the list last night with an 88. Since there were numerous others with 86s, 87s and 88s, Topping may be able to get into the charmed 16.

The field of 256 contestants went to the tees today with T. Russell Brown of Lake Champlain leading with a total of 76, four under his nearest competitors Harold V. Garrity of Asbury Park, and W. C. Hunt of Houston, who were tied with 80.

LOWELL MAN'S CLAIM IS DISMISSED

(Special to The Sun)

STATE HOUSE, Boston, April 3.—The industrial accident board has decided in the case of Frederick H. Gunther who claimed compensation after the board had discontinued his payments last January that he was not entitled to further remuneration because he has fully recovered from an injury he received June 2, 1921.

At the hearing Gunther, who lives in Lowell, testified that he fractured his right leg June 2, 1921, while working as a repair man for the Pitts Motor Sales company. He was paid total compensation until he returned to work in November, 1922, he said and partial compensation up to Jan. 25, 1923, when payments were discontinued by order of a board member.

At the present time he is employed doing clerical work at the Union National bank, he said. He receives $12 a week in this capacity, he testified, and at the time of his injury he was receiving $18 a week. He has not tried to do repair work since the accident, he said, but he knows he could not do it because of the condition of his leg.

In an impartial report, Dr. Charles L. Scudder said: "I have examined Gunther carefully. I have a report of the X-ray taken by Dr. A. W. George of 43 Bay State road.

"In view of the man's age, a young man, in view of the multiplicity of minor complaints as following the accident I am inclined to believe that this man is able to do work and is not suffering from any permanent disability dependent upon the accident. The only thing that is hard to decide is whether his statement that the injured leg is weaker than before the injury is correct or not. I am inclined to believe that it is true. It is hard to prove one way or the other. He has not tried at any time to do his old work. There is a tendency for this man to overemphasize his symptoms."

Commissioner Joseph A. Parks dismissed the claim. HOYT.

MR. MASON WILL TALK ON FOLK MUSIC

Dance forms and folk music will be the subject of the lecture to be given in the music hall of the Lowell high school, Kirk street, on Thursday evening, April 5, at 7.30 o'clock by Stuart Mason, well known composer and member of the faculty of the New England conservatory. This lecture is the third of a series of lectures of music appreciation, which the division of university extension, Massachusetts department of education, is offering in Lowell.

The course is intended to develop a more intelligent appreciation of music by teaching the essentials of listening. Special emphasis will be given to the distinguishing characteristics of musical masterpieces. No technical knowledge of music is necessary.

Mr. Mason has recently received from the French government the decoration of "Palmes Academiques" in recognition of his attainments as composer, and as interpreter of old and modern French music. Several of his compositions have been produced by prominent organizations.

The other lectures of the course will be given on the following subjects: The Rondo, Sonata and Symphony; the Opera and Oratorio; Studies of Great Composers; Bach, Handel, Beethoven; The Romantic school; Modern Music.

All persons interested are invited to attend this lecture at the Lowell high school on Thursday evening, April 5 at 7.30 o'clock. Only the usual small fee will be charged for enrollment.

Here's $75,000 Player in His New Giant Uniform

Jimmy O'Connell, San Francisco outfielder, who cost the New York Giants $75,000, talking with "Dutch" Reuther, Brooklyn pitching star and also a Pacific coast product, at the Giants training camp.

By NEA Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 21.—High priced rookie phenoms usually have pretty tough sledding when they report to their owners—but Jimmy O'Connell, who cost John McGraw $75,000, skipped in easily.

In his first batting practice here he cracked a fair ball over the fence. He showed class in his fielding, too, and has McGraw and his coaches declaring that the coast leaguer is the find of the decade.

Incidentally, Jimmy's modest manner has made a hit with the rest of the Giant regulars, and they have elected him a "regular guy."

In his first exhibition game he got four hits and a walk in five times at bat.

BEAUTY CONTEST AT ASSOCIATE HALL

Associate hall last night was the scene of a model and beauty contest conducted by Francis J. Roane, manager of the hall, and Lowell's beauty turned out in large numbers to take part in the contest and to compete for the numerous prizes offered.

Manager Roane chose five men as judges from the gathering and they in turn chose 20 girls as the leading contestants from the throng. At intermission these girls were lined up on the stage numbered with large numbers, and the spectators voted for their choice of ten. The first prize, a necklace of La Tausen pearls, was awarded to Miss Nora Cummings. Nine other prizes of the same nature were awarded to Miss Alice Corkery, Katherine Lamb, Helen O'Malley, Blanche Jubinville Katherine Hunley, Katherine Dowd, Victoria Taylor, Nellie Grant and Helen Tarella. The other ten who had been chosen by the judges as among the first 20 were as follows, Juliet Harmon, Irene Benjamin, Viola Wells, Helen McGee, Mary McLarnen, Lillian Novak, Rose Corcoran, Lillian Thurston, Eva Pelletier and Ada Walt.

COMING FROM NEW YORK

Word comes from New York that Joe Fox, the featherweight champion of Great Britain, who is to meet Lew Paluso in the feature event of the Moody club card on Thursday night, has a very strong following of English admirers in New York, a number of whom will make the trip to Lowell to see him box.

Fox, who came to this country wearing the Lord Lonsdale championship belt, has made a fine impression on this side of the pond, and among the notables he has boxed are Johnny Kilbane Joe Lynch, Joe Tipliz, Frankie Burns, Benny Valger, Eugene Criqui, and others of class and prominence.

Paluso needs no recommendation as his work here against Newport Johnny Brown created a sensation, and wherever boxing fans meet they discuss his brilliant endeavor. Truly Paluso made a great impression here, and his spectacular work found many proclaiming him a future champion. He certainly appeared to have everything in his battle with Brown. It will be interesting to see him against a man who is reputed to be equally as clever.

Two semi-finals are carded: Jack O'Brien of Lawrence vs. Lefty Williams of Lowell, Robert E. Lee of Boston vs. Jim Rocco of Boston. In a preliminary Johnny Mack and Eddie Purtell will be opponents.

Jack Dillon Wins

LYNN, April 3.—Jack Dillon of Woburn was given the decision over Billy Shyne of Quincy at the end of the feature 10-round bout of the Casino A.C. show last night.

BASKETBALL TOURNEY

CHICAGO, April 3.—Teams from the Atlantic seaboard and the far northwest will open the national interscholastic basketball tourney at the University of Chicago today.

Twenty teams of the 40 of the country's best entered in the tournament will play today. The tournament brings together 29 state champions and 11 runners up and 100 players, coaches, teachers and officials, representing 31 states.

In a clash tonight between Batonville Washn., High and Fitchburg, Mass., High, the relative merits of eastern and western methods of the game were expected to be brought out. The former team is from a town of 500 and has won 32 straight games, while Fitchburg is holder of the state title and champion of middle New England and is regarded as possibly the strongest eastern entry.

ONE ROOKIE PITCHER LOOKS GOOD TO RICKEY

From a pitching standpoint, the spring training trip of the Cardinals at Bradentown, Fla., seems destined to prove a failure, as far as the recruits are concerned.

Of the many pitchers taken south only one has shown enough stuff to impress Manager Rickey that he is up to the major league standard: That pitcher is Fred Wigington, a big right hander from the Nebraska State league.

Eddie Dyer, a left hander from Rice Institute, Texas, is promising, but Rickey intends to make an outfielder of him, so as to utilize his speed and batting ability.

All of which makes it seem that the pitching burden will be entirely up to the veterans.

Rickey feels that Pfeffer and Sherdell will deliver, and is hopeful of getting much aid from Toney, Haines and Doak.

STASIAK FAILS TO TOSS SILVA

Rarely has such enthusiasm attended a wrestling bout in this city as that which prevailed at the Crescent rink last night when Stanley Stasiak, the Polish Hercules, attempted to throw both John Romano and Justania Silva within 75 minutes. Stasiak failed to accomplish the task and therefore lost the match, with Silva the last of the two men to go against him being declared the winner.

Stasiak threw Romano in 28 minutes and 35 seconds, but he failed to negotiate a fall on Silva in the remaining 47 minutes. As this pair grappled furiously, one to score a fall and the other to prevent his shoulders being pinned to the mat, the crowd, the largest of the season, was in an uproar. When finally Silva was declared the winner, a great demonstration followed.

Romano, was the first to enter the ring for the big bout. He is a well built fellow, weighing in the vicinity of 200. He works with considerable speed and the way he extricated himself from apparently impossible holds stamped him a wrestler of merit. Stasiak, however, proved the stronger of the two and he displayed dazzling speed for a man of his weight. The pair went at it in vigorous fashion, and applied many great holds, only to have them broken in quick order. Finally after 28 minutes of strenuous work Stasiak lifted Romano off the floor and swung him through the air several times. Then he dropped him to the mat and pounced upon him, the fall coming as a result of a combination flying dervish and inside crotch hold.

After a rest of ten minutes, Starlak returned to the ring to take on Silva. This was the part of the bout that the fans were anxiously awaiting. It was a bitter struggle against a pair of giants. Stasiak started right after Silva with great vigor. He grabbed his heavier opponent and tried hard to apply a head hold, but the Portuguese champion always managed to wiggle out. Silva appeared content to stay on the defensive, allowing Stasiak to tire himself. But when caught in a dangerous position, Silva put his great strength and bulk to work with the desired result. For half an hour the giants tugged away, first one being on top and then the other, with the supporters of both cheering wildly for their favorite. In the last ten minutes of the allotted time Stasiak worked furiously in an attempt to win. He resorted to every maneuver known to the game. Finally he had Silva down, with one shoulder to the mat, but despite a herculean effort he could not bring the other one to the canvas. The pair were in this position when the 75 minutes expired and Referee Burbank, who by the way makes an ideal official, declared Silva the winner.

In the opening bout Paul Bowser and Charlie Marshall met in a one fall match to a finish. The pair went to it with great vim and for more than half an hour they engaged in a fast and skillful battle. After 36 minutes and 11 seconds of whirlwind endeavor Bowser negotiated a fall as a result of a flying mare.

The bouts were staged under the auspices of the Polish Falcons, Henry Golee in charge, and they proved successful in every way. The Falcons are to conduct more bout, the object of which is to increase their building fund. Mr. Golee announced that next week George Koisonaros, the Greek champion, would meet Justinia Silva in a match to a finish. On the same program Stanley Stasiak will fight it out with Lawson Pilkham, the Attlebro giant, to a finish. The preliminary will have as principals Luke Chak of Lowell and Charlie Marshall.

BASKETBALL GAME TOMORROW NIGHT

The city championship basketball series between the F. M. C. I. and Broadways will be resumed at the Crescent rink tomorrow night, when the fifth game of the classic will be played. Since the last game, a week ago, both teams have engaged in a number of practice sessions and both outfits are on edge for the battle. Arthur Ryan of Nashua will referee and the game will start at 8.15. A preliminary game will be played at 7.30.

OPERA BY RADIO HALTED

Broadcasting Held Up When Navy Yard Picked Up S. O. S. Calls for Steamer

BOSTON, April 3.—Radio fans listening to the broadcasting of "Die Meistersingers," from the Boston Opera House, lost 10 minutes of the opera about 8 last evening, when the Charlestown Navy Yard ordered all broadcasting stopped. The Navy Yard had picked up faint S.O.S. calls, and the concert broadcasting interfered with the signals.

It developed that the calls for assistance were from the steamer City of Victoria, which was afire off the Azores, according to messages picked up at the Navy Yard. After ten minutes permission was given for resumption of the opera broadcasting. The singers at the Opera House kept on singing in the meantime, of course, so the fans lost the music while the radio was under the ban. The broadcasting was done by Station WNAC, Shepard Stores, direct from the Opera House, starting at 7.15.

AMERICA'S GREATEST BARITONE COMING

The average young singer starting on his or her career has one dream beyond all other dreams, that of being included in the roster of singers of the Metropolitan Opera House. Some live to see the dream realized but only a very few. Reinald Werrenrath, distinguished baritone, who is to appear here April 10 under the management of the Lowell Choral society never gave the Metropolitan in particular nor opera in general more than a passing thought up to the day when out of the clear sky came an invitation from Gatti-Casazza to join the company. It was absolutely without precedent. Here was a young singer who had made an admirable reputation for himself, but he had never been on the stage, knew no operatic roles and had never shown any particular interest in them.

Of course, Werrenrath accepted. Who would not, but he did not do so with the idea that opera would henceforth make his career. As he said at the time: "Fascinating though operatic work is, it could never possibly be enticing enough to woo me from concert work. It is a real joy to have a new idea to work on, a new point of view to base one's studies on, but apart from that I feel that my life work lies in the concert field and I could never desert it, come what may."

Werrenrath's debut, which he made without any rehearsal whatever, was a success, and his performance of Valentine in "Faust," which came later, was a sensation, but for all that he was never truly interested in the work. His loss to the operatic stage is a serious one, for he had all the qualities which go to make a great dramatic artist. But in the end he can give pleasure to an infinitely larger number of people by singing in concert than he could in the very restricted field of the Metropolitan.

WOMAN LOCATED BY WIRELESS

Inquiries recently broadcasted from the Amrad wireless station at Medford Hillside at the request of Trull & Wier of this city, who have been trying to locate a missing woman, Miss Grace E. Bicknell, missing for 20 years, has resulted in locating a woman of that name in Elizabeth, N. J. Today a member of the local law firm started for New Jersey to investigate the claim of the sender of the reply to the widespread radio call for information as to the woman's whereabouts.

If the woman is the one whose address is desired, she will be informed of legal procedures involving several valuable North Carolina properties now in the hands of administrative authorities for distribution to lawful heirs.

"Adam's Rib," a Cecil B. DeMille production, is the main attraction at the Merrimack Square theatre the first part of this week and it is taking the crowds who attend by storm. It is a feature picture and the scenery includes the hustling wheat pit of the Chicago board of trade, the ballroom of a millionaire's home, and massive forest scenes, depicting the life of the cavemen, untold years ago. The cast is what is known as all-star, Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Elliott Dexter, Theodor Kosloff and Pauline Garon taking the leading parts in this production.

The story revolves around Michael Ramsay, a Chicago broker, his wife and daughter, Tillie, a 17-year-old flapper. Mrs. Ramsay is left to her own resources for amusement, due to the fact that her husband has but one thought—money. She meets M. Jaromic, deposed king of a small Balkan state, and becomes infatuated with him. On the occasion of the Ramsay's 19th anniversary, Michael Ramsay returns home to find his wife in this stranger's arms. He figures that the only way to keep his wife is to have the king put back on his throne and he immediately takes steps to do so.

Tillie has fallen in love with a professor of anthropology and has also seen and understood her mother's actions. In endeavoring to keep her mother out of trouble, she gets "in dutch" with him. She later goes to the museum to explain her actions and basis her story on a picture of cave life. In this story a flash-back is shown of many scenes coincident with life among the cavemen and primeval love.

"Mud and Sand," a comedy, featuring, "Rhubarb Vaseline," as a satire on maladors and others who make their living in the bull fighting rings of Spain. The International News Weekly and "Fun From the Press" completes an exceptionally good bill.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

This is National Vaudeville Artists' week all over this land and patrons and lovers of this highly varied type of entertainment have an opportunity to help a most worthy cause which concerns itself principally with providing comfort and necessaries of life for members of the profession in less fortunate circumstances than others.

In connection with the observance there is a bill at the Lowell Keith house this week of more than ordinary interest and worth, in fact, it is one of the best vaudeville salads served to local theatregoers this season. Standing out pre-eminently are Lloyd Ibach's entertainers, seven young men born with a jazz song in their hearts and played now for the edification and enjoyment of Keith audiences on banjos, saxophones, violins, drums and piano. No such jazz symphony has been heard on a local theatre stage this year and last evening's audience greeted it with sustained applause. The boys in the act include Lloyd Ibach, Allen Quirk, Perry Aiken, Jimmie Nealty, Eddie Heffner, Henry Hammond and Charles Keller, the last named being clarinet and leader.

Remember Henry Norwood and Alpha Hall in "It May Have Happened to You?" They have played Lowell before, yes, more than once, and their humor has not lost any of its individuality through recurring performances. It's big time stuff, drawled out inimitably and with excellent effect.

Billy Zeck and Gladys Randolph offer a comedy skit, "Grooming the Groom," that is good enough to take headline position on most any program. Getting the bridegroom ready for his fourth venture upon the matrimonial ocean is the reason for the act, but it branches out along other lines and presents Miss Randolph in several catchy song numbers.

York and Maybelle are rapid workers along accepted comedy lines and the Melroy sisters dance exceedingly well together. Ed and Ida Tindell open the show with an aerial act and the program is brought to a whizbang close by the Three Whirlwinds, sensational acrobats on roller skates.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

"The Bird of Paradise," Richard Watson Tully's captivating romance of Hawaii, is the attraction at the Lowell Opera House this week. For the past two weeks the entire staff of the local theatre has been hard at work to make the production as wonderful as when Lenore Ulric created the role of Luana in New York. The story of the sacrificing love of the Hawaiian princess, who finally plunges into the crater of a volcano, has now toured the country for about ten years with always the same result. Audiences are enthralled by it wherever it is shown. The Lutringer players are assisted by the original Hawaiian quintet, who do much to reproduce accurately the romance and the beauty of the beach at Waikiki where much of the action takes place. The scenic staff has fairly outdone itself in the attempt to reproduce with vivid realism the magic beauty of the Pacific isles. Mary Anne Dentler plays the part of the Hawaiian princess, who sacrifices everything for love, and Arthur de Lord plays the part of the beachcomber, who is regenerated to real manhood by the love of a good woman. Richard Morgan, whose artistry has made him a popular favorite with the patrons of the local house, has the well known part of Dr. Willson, whose fall is sudden and final, once he is gripped by the fatal spell of the South Sea islands where beauty and languorousness are synonemous. The Hawaiians are headed by the world renowned Moke Kolawe, who led his troupe in a number of native songs and dances, that all lovers of music and especially of Hawaiian music are sure to appreciate. These travelers from the far distant Pacific are the best of their kind being skilled musicians and splendid types of a race that is fast nearing extinction. Despite the large advance sale of tickets, "The Bird of Paradise" will run for one week only at the local theatre because of the fact that the Hawaiian troupe are booked in advance for theatres all over the country.

THE STRAND THEATRE

A picture of unusual local interest, "The Voice From the Minaret," is being shown as a headliner at the Strand theatre for the first three days of the week. It is of unusual interest because it features in the leading roles Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien, two screen artists who have become favorites among local moving picture fans. Miss Talmadge and Mr. O'Brien appear to advantage in their respective roles.

The play unfurls a very interesting story, that of an adventurous romance of a noblewoman and youth from England, who venture on a pilgrimage through the orient and deserts. Their love transcends obstacles and difficulties, but eventually they are saved from folly by the "voice from the Minaret." Eventually, however, their love triumphs and a thrilling story is brought to a happy conclusion.

"The Ghost Patrol," a drama written by Sinclair Lewis of "Main Street" fame, is next in line and brings to the footlights numerous stars of Filmdom. The story is that of an aged policeman, who served on one beat 30 years and refused promotions to remain with the people whom he loved and who regarded him as a father. The officer, because of advanced age, is forced to retire against his will and his petition for reinstatement later is refused. Broken-hearted, the aged officer dons his uniform and defies his superiors. What follows can be better appreciated on the screen. The story is well worth seeing.

In addition there is a series of pleasing sayings fro "Fun From the Press," as well as interesting and instructive current events and very enjoyable, pleasing musical numbers, not saying anything about the Century comedy.

WILL CONDUCT ARTILLERY SCHOOL

Capt Jackson Palmer, U.S.R., and several other reserve officers who have seen active duty with the artillery, are to conduct a school for those officers who have been appointed to detachments of the field artillery reserves allocated to Lowell who have not had previous active duty with artillery regiments. These men have all been in the service but some were in infantry, ordinance, and quarter-master detachments. The school will deal with the bringing up of guns and getting them in position for firing at the enemy. Many intricate places of workmanship, such as range-finding, will be taught along with the main subject of getting the gun into a position where it can do the most damage to the enemy. The date for the first meeting of the school has not as yet been set, but it is expected that it will be in the near future.

NEW RESTAURANT IN MARKET STREET

A new restaurant has opened up in Lowell within the past 10 days. This statement is news to many of the readers but it should not be. It is located on Market street, just beyond Cardinal O'Connell parkway and is called the "Minerva." It is run by three local Greeks who are endeavoring to upbuild their own section of the city.

A group of local newspapermen made a tour of investigation of this new eating place, and after sampling bits of deliciously cooked American and Greek food and going on a tour through the kitchens of this establishment, they were unanimous in their approval of the place both as to the quality of the food and to the cleanliness of the place. The first dish placed before them was a lobster salad. This was so good that it put all in the right humor for anything else that might come. Then came rice, rice fixed with peas and so deliciously cooked that it just naturally slid down. Then, the piece de resistance chicken. So tender and still so firm, it was the crowning joy of an evening. Another feature was their coffee. The chef claims that there is no better coffee to be had in th country and the gathering last night did not hesitate to call for a second and even a third helping.

The owners of this new restaurant are Christ Ziogkas, a former president of the Greek community and well-known business man; George Zouyelos, for 20 years a resident of Lowell and for many years in the restaurant business and Louis Kalofolias, a graduate of the Lowell high school and a veteran of the World war. The chef is Dionwelus Grivas, chief for the Athen's cafe in Boston for many years.

The location of this new eating place is extremely handy for people working in the vicinity of City Hall, and it is well worth going to even from down street. The many people in Lowell who like Greek food, and who always make it their business to go to the Athens when in Boston should go to the Minerva.

NEW ORGANIZATION WORK PROGRAMS

Suggestions from chamber of commerce members covering new organization work programs for the present year, were received at executive headquarters this afternoon, when a meeting of the 1923 program committee was scheduled. Following the reception of suggestions and a discussion of various defined projects of interest to Lowell and its inhabitants as well as general business, a definite program of work for "carrying on" may be announced.

FALL RIVER TEXTILE UNIONS TO ACT ON OFFER OF 12 1-2 P. C. INCREASE

FALL RIVER, April 3.--The textile unions were today preparing for their general meetings called for Thursday night to act on the offer from the Cotton Manufacturers' association to increase wages 12½ per cent. effective April 30. No forecast is being made by the textile council as to the outcome, but the rank and file of operatives are said to favor acceptance. The offer from the mill men is a compromise on the demand for 15 per cent., and rejection of the proposition would precipitate a strike beyond question. The United Textile Workers are still standing firm for an advance of 20½ per cent. and decisive action may be taken by this organization at any time to press their claim for the full advance demanded. The operatives enrolled in the U.T.W. will come under the 12½ per cent. advance, regardless of the outcome of the demand for the higher increase.

John L. Campos, secretary of the Doffers' union of the United Textile Workers, today in discussing the 12½ per cent. increase, said: "The advance is too small and not in comparison with the marked improvement in the industry. We think our demand for 20 per cent. is fair and reasonable, and we now assure the workers that we intend to secure the goal we started out to attain, namely, the full restoration of the 22½ per cent. cut in December, 1920."

To Accept at New Bedford

NEW BEDFORD, April 3.—Notices posted today in all the cotton mills associated with the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers' association of an increase in wages of 12½ per cent., effective April 30, will affect approximately 40,000 workers in this city. The textile council will ask the various locals to vote on the wage increase, and labor leaders predict its acceptance as satisfactory.

The advance will make the New Bedford rate 234.34 per cent. of the scale paid up to January, 1916, and within 34.43 per cent. of the peak, which was reached with 268.77 between June 1920 and January, 1922, when wages were reduced 22½ per cent.

The wage rate is computed on figures taken from the year book of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and the rate paid from March 1912, to January, 1916, is taken as the pre-war rate of 100 per cent.

To Discuss Acceptance

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 3. Meetings of locals affiliated with the United Textile Workers of America are to be held this week to discuss the advisability of accepting the wage increases announced by manufacturers which are expected to be about 12½ per cent or to persist in the demand for a 20½ per cent increase. The first meeting will be held tonight in Olneyville.

No notices have been posted at the Arnold Print Works, employing 1400 hands, the Windsor Print Works employing 800 and the Beaver Mills, which employs 350 in this city. These mills in the past have followed the lead of other cotton textile plants in granting increases.

DEMANDS CONVICTION OF WM. Z. FOSTER

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 3. (By the Associated Press.)—Defense of American institutions demands the conviction of William Z. Foster of Chicago, charged with violating the Michigan law against criminal syndicalism, the state argued today at Foster's trial.

Foster was arrested as a result of attending a secret convention of the communist party of America held in the lonely dunes on the shore of Lake Michigan, last August. He is the first of 32 arrested after the convention to face trial.

Charles Gore, state attorney for Berrien county, opened for the prosecution with a plea for conviction, which carries a sentence of 10 years in prison or a fine of $5000, or both, at the discretion of the court. Mr. Gore was followed by Humphrey Gray, Boston Harbor banker, philanthropist and church founder, representing the defense.

The closing arguments will be made this afternoon by D. L. Smith, assistant attorney general of Michigan and Frank P. Walsh, of New York and Washington, chief of counsel for Foster.

The state announced today that as soon as the verdict is returned it will ask that the trial of Charles E. Ruthenberg of Cleveland, one of Foster's co-defendants, be set for next Monday.

STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, April 3.—Further liquidation imparted a reactionary tone to opening prices in today's stock market. Lackawanna Railroad dropped 1½ points to a new low record for the year, and Phillips Petroleum yielded 1. Initial sales of Crucible, Kelly-Springfield, Pere Marquette, Rock Island and Transcontinental Oil were made at fractional concessions. Short covering operations caused slight improvement in Studebaker, Eldon Pierce, New York Central, Sinclair and Chandler Motor.

Buying support appeared in some sections of the list during the first half hour and gave the market a steadier tone. Chandler, Austin Nichols, American Can, Chino Copper and American Agricultural Chemical preferred extended their early gains to between 1 and 1½ points. Northern Pacific, Baldwin and Allied Chemical gained large fractions. Motor accessories were heavy, Stewart Warner dropping 1½ and Stromberg Carburetor 1. American Smelting, American Tobacco B, Virginia Iron, Punta Alegres Sugar and Great Northern Ore all lost ground. Foreign exchanges opened easier, demand sterling dropping ½ cent to $4.67⅛ and French francs yielding 6 points to 6.57 cents.

Inability or unwillingness to meet margin calls sent out after yesterday's sharp break accounted for some of the early heaviness. Short covering operations were induced in spots by the appearance of fresh buying power, but the general market presented a ragged appearance during most of the morning. Toward mid-day the whole list again turned reactionary in response to the heavy speculative offerings of some of the oils and other industrial leaders. Pan-American issues broke 3 points or more and California Petroleum, Producers & Refiners, American Can, Anaconda, Lima Locomotive and General Electric dropped 1 to 2 points. Call money opened at 5½ per cent.

Pressure reacted coincident with the easing of the call money rate to 5 per cent. Some of the speculative favorites rebounded a point or more, but scattered selling persisted in other quarters. U. S. Rubber, International Harvester, Beechnut Packing, United Fruit and Remington Typewriter declined 1½ to 2½ points.

The closing was firm. Further easing of the call money rate to 4½ per cent brought further buying orders into the market in the late dealings with the investment railroad, domestic oil and automotive shares making the best recovery from recent weakness.

BURNING SHIP SPEEDS TOWARDS AZORES

BOSTON, April 3.—The British freighter City of Victoria, on fire at sea too far away from other vessels to obtain early assistance, was believed to be speeding toward the port of San Miguel, in the Azores, today. The President Fillmore itself was too far off to be of any direct aid.

The schooner bound from Oporto, Spain, to St. Johns, N. F., with a cargo of salt, was then set afire.

ONE MAN KILLED AT UNION ELECTION

CLEVELAND, O., April 3.—One man was shot and instantly killed and another probably fatally wounded in a fight which broke out during an election of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' local union No. 47 here last night. Riot calls brought all available police to the meeting hall. The wounded man was taken to a hospital, where his condition was said to be critical. A third man was less seriously hurt.

The dead man is believed to be Bert Bowan of Lakewood. He was shot three times through the head and once through the breast.

John O'Brien, secretary of the union, was wounded three times. Upon his arrival at the hospital, physicians summoned his family, saying that death was only a matter of minutes.

PROTECTION AGAINST ALL POISON GASES

NEW HAVEN, April 3.—Perfection of a mask that will give protection against all poison gases, including monoxide, was announced by Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service of the United States army, at the dinner given to the council of the American Chemical society by the New Haven chamber of commerce last night.

The mask has particular value for fire fighters and men engaged in fumigating ships or buildings.

DEATH WAS DUE TO BLOOD POISONING

According to an inquest, held some time ago by Judge Frederic A. Fisher, the result of which was made known today, the death on March 12 of Theodoro Brown was caused by blood poisoning. The finding reads as follows: "On March 3, 1923, at or about 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon, a Mack truck belonging to Fred H. Rourke was being driven in a westerly direction along Pine street. The truck contained about five tons of coal, and the street was covered to a considerable depth with snow and ice, causing the truck to sway from side to side as it passed over the rough and irregular surface of the street and along the deep ruts in the snow.

"Standing at the rear of the truck and with one foot inside the body of the truck and the other resting on the running board, were two helpers, so-called, in the employment of said Fred H. Rourke, whose duty it was to assist the driver in unloading the coal. After backing out of a snowdrift, the truck was started forward at a slow rate of speed when two small boys, whose identities are unknown, threw snowballs at the men standing in the rear of the truck. Both ducked their heads and one of them, Theodore Brown, a married man, 23 years of age, residing at 66 Nichols street, slipped and fell to the ground. It is probable, but as I find by no means certain, that Mr. Brown would have retained his position on the moving truck but for his effort to avoid the snowballs. The truck ran over his lower leg causing a compound fracture of both bones. Blood poisoning ensued and he died at St. John's hospital on March 12.

"I find that death was due to blood poisoning and not occasioned by criminal negligence or unlawful act of any person or persons, natural or corporate."

CURTAILMENT AT THE POSTOFFICE

Owing to the fact that the most rigid economy is necessary in the post office department, it was announced today by Postmaster Delisle that beginning immediately the following time schedule would be in effect on the windows at the local postoffice: Money order and postal savings department, 9 a. m. to 6 p. m., Saturdays 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; registered mail window, 7 a. m. to 6 p. m.; stamp window, 7.30 a. m. to 6.30 p. m.; general delivery window, 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. This means a saving of practically an hour in each of these departments.

This curtailment is in accordance with instructions received from Washington and the new hours will remain in force at least until June 30, the end of the fiscal year. It is believed that the budget made up for the next fiscal year is large enough to enable the postoffices throughout the country to go back to their old schedule after that date.

Not only in New York and Philadelphia, but wherever their numerous trails lead, were the detectives hunting. Some were in New Haven, Conn., seeking an interview with Edmund J. Fully 300 employes will be hired. Many renovations will be made in the local plant.

The assessed value of the land and mill is in excess of $350,000. J. Murray Howe of Boston, and associates, owners of the mill, made the disposal. The No. 2 mill deal was handled by Peabody, Brown, Rowley & Storey, Boston attorneys.

The Newmarket company head offices and mills are located at Newmarket, N. H. Lowell labor will be employed in the Market street plant.

PLANS PURCHASE OF BIGELOW MILL

No. 3 mill of the Bigelow-Hartford group of mills in Market street soon will be purchased by Mark J. McCann, local agent for Studebaker cars, for conversion into a garage and sales room capable of accommodating upwards of 400 machines. The building in question is assessed for $50,000 and, according to Mr. McCann an additional $100,000 will be expended in alterations. If Mr. McCann's plans fully materialize, he will operate the largest garage in the city.

ORDINANCE TO ABOLISH PUBLIC SERVICE BOARD

Another attempt to do away with the board of public service is included in an ordinance filed today with the city clerk for presentation to the city council by Councilor Maurice J. Lambert, Jr. It calls for the replacement of the present board by another to be designated as a board of public works and provides for the election of such officers as the superintendent of streets and superintendent of water works by the city council rather than by the board.

A somewhat similar ordinance put forward by Councilor Daly is due for final action by the council tonight, although an adverse report upon it has been submitted by the committee on ordinances.

MANY DEATHS FIRST 3 MONTHS OF YEAR

For the first three months of this year 548 deaths occurred in Lowell, according to reports now at hand, in the office of the health department, or nearly 100 more than during the same months of last year, when the total was 451.

The rigors of a most distressing winter, during which disease has been prevalent in many fatal forms, is responsible for the shocking increase. The infant mortality rate also was considerably larger, with 102 deaths of children under one years of age, against 71 last year. Although records are not at hand in regard to deaths of children under five years, it is believed the increase in this respect is even greater than in the case of infants.

ASSESSORS ARE REVALUING PROPERTY

The board of assessors today began the work of revaluing more than 1700 pieces of real estate property in the city which has been enhanced in worth during the year by alterations, repairs and additions, and also property now in the process of erection, but not yet finished. At least three months will be necessary to complete the work.

The assessing department has no automobile for its own use and, therefore, must rely upon the generosity of other departments. For the time being the assessors are using the mayor's Hudson coupe.

Adventures of The Twins

"HELLO," ANSWERED NANCY POLITELY. WE CAME TO SET THINGS TO RIGHTS."

Off went the twins to Sugar-Plum Land which lay between Castor Land and Plaster Land.

"What'd you come for?" asked someone.

"Hello," answered Nancy politely. "We came to set things to rights."

"Well, it's high time somebody did," said the rabbit. "King Gingerbread made a new law yesterday nobody can obey and we'll all have to go to jail unless he takes it back."

"What law?" asked Nick.

"He said bathing was a good habit and every Sugar-Plum Lander would have to take a bath twice a day."

"That's awful!" replied Nick. "Even once is bad enough."

"It won't do even at that," said the embroidery-pattern rabbit, waggling his ears "We can't even bathe once, any of us, except the Kewpie off the top of the wedding cake. It's made of bisque and won't run; but how in creation can folk made of cake and sugar take a bath? We'd all run away and mix together and when we dried off, like as not I'd have an ear off the knick-knack dog, a leg off the lemon cookie sparrow and a tail off the gum-drop pig."

"I never thought of that!" declared Nancy. "We'll go to see King Gingerbread at once. Maybe he'll take the law back."

"Goody!" cried the chocolate rabbit. "I'll spread the good news." And away he hopped to tell the other Sugar-Plum Landers that nobody need endanger his life by taking a bath.

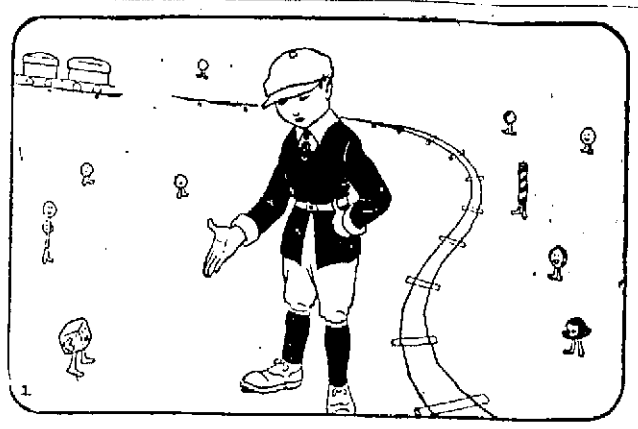

"Say," he called, stopping suddenly. "You'd better stop at the cut-out lady's house and ask her to sew King Gingerbread's buttons on straight. She sews them crooked and he gets mad and makes silly laws."

"All right!" called Nancy.

Jack Daw in Candy Land. Chapter 11

Caramel explained to Jack that the train of chocolate peppermints was bound for the land Jack came from. Jack watched it disappear in the distance and then said, "Oh, now I understand. Those candies will soon be in a drug store or candy store where folks can buy them."

"You're right!" shouted Caramel. And, at that moment, a lot of pretty little girls came running up. "Oh, Mister Caramel," said one of them, "we want to play drop the handkerchief. Will you let us take yours?" "Well," replied Caramel, "I will if I can find it."

Caramel looked all around but couldn't find his handkerchief. Then a happy thought struck him. "First of all, girls," he said, "I want to introduce you to Jack Daw. Maybe he will let you take his handkerchief." As the little girls bowed, Jack was told that they were candy kisses. (Continued.)

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court within and for the County of Middlesex:

Respectfully libels and represents William E. BRITISH STEAMER ON FIRE IN MIDOCEAN

BOSTON, April 3.—The British steamer City of Victoria is on fire in mid-Atlantic, according to messages from the vessel intercepted here last night. The position of the steamer was given as 18.50 west longitude and latitude 50.10.

The City of Victoria was said to be steaming at full steam towards Azores. She is a vessel of 3530 tons.

Thousands of radio fans listening in on an opera broadcast by a station in Boston were disappointed when the concert was abruptly discontinued while distress messages from the burning vessel were copied. The opera resumed, however, after an interruption of about 15 minutes.

Radio messages intercepted here from ships at sea said that a British steamer, the name of which was not caught, was rushing to the relief of the burning vessel. The distance of the unidentified vessel from the City of Victoria was not given.

Communication by wireless was being maintained between the City of Victoria and the steamer rushing to her side, radio messages said. The cause of the fire and how far it has spread were not learned from the intercepted wireless messages.

"PAGEANT BEAUTIFUL"

Easter Monday Party by M. T. I. at Auditorium Was Big Success

Spectacular in every respect, the "Pageant Beautiful," in connection with the annual Easter Monday party and dance under the auspices of the Mathew Temperance Institute in the Memorial Auditorium last night, was an unqualified success, the novel and aesthetic feature meeting with the unanimous approbation of more than 1500 interested spectators, and surpassing in engenuity any previous event of the popular local society. Miss Esther M. Downing and Miss Anna M. O'Day, Lowell Vocational school teachers, supervised the pageant, and $200 in gold was awarded the five best appearing classes by the following three impartial judges from the Lawrence schools: Miss Eliza Rigby Richards, Miss Helen L. Gilcreast, and Mrs. Grace Collins Cavanaugh, who came to their decision after careful consideration of the color scheme, conception of character, order of group, style and workmanship and group as a whole.

Led by Floor Director Edward Mealey and Miss Anna Martin, and Assistant Floor Director James Duffy and Miss Helen Doran and directed by John W. Sharkey, the participants in the grand march presented an excellent panorama of beauty as they marched and counter-marched over the spacious floor. The array of colors, representing individual and distinctive characters, the costumes of exquisite design, showing skilled workmanship and painstaking endeavor, and the entire general appearance of the marchers lent a charming atmosphere to the scene.

First prize was awarded to the "Columbia" girls, a group of misses from the high school annex class conducted by Mrs. Helen Rouse, and whose red, white and blue costumes, typical of the character portrayed, merited the capturing of the $75, the award being made by Mayor John J. Donovan. The second prize of $50 went to the "French Sewing Girls" composed of a group of high school annex pupils under the direction of Miss Rose Ward. The "Periods" group, representing the evolution of dress from 1492 to 1923 was adjudged the winner of the third prize, $35. This group was directed by Miss Orina Mongrane, of the Greenhalge school. Fourth prize found the "Irish Colleens" in the winning role and merited a $25 prize. Miss Katherine McDonald of the high school annex is the teacher of this group. Fifth and last prize went to the "Easter Eggs" under Miss Mary Turgeon of the Franklin and Pawtucket schools. "Playing Cards," under Miss Helen Zollinger of the Moody school, and "Easter Lilies," under Miss Mary Bradley of the Butler school, received honorable mention. Other groups and their teachers were:

Witches, Miss Carol Allen and the girls of the high school annex; bridal party, Mrs. Mary Durant and girls of the high school annex; fairies, Miss Dorothy Ward and girls of the Pawtucketville school; Priscillas, Miss Mildred Mulqueeny and girls of the Colburn school; Polish national girls, Mrs. Elvira Wince and girls of the Varnum school; Miss Independence, Mrs. Catharine Burns and girls of the Colburn and Edson schools; Chinese girls, Miss Marion Lawler and girls of the Girls' City club.

Following the pageant, general dancing was held until 1 o'clock.

The pageant committee was composed of Arthur M. Flaherty, John J. Bowers and Thomas J. Tighe.

The Easter Monday committee was composed of the following: Arthur M. Flaherty, chairman; John J. Bowers, Frank J. Boyle, Thomas Brady, Patrick J. Bradley, William F. Busby, James J. Campbell, Edward Carroll, Frank D. Carroll, Thomas M. Carty, John F. Conlon, Edward T. Draper, James A. Duffy, Thomas J. Durkin, William Finnegan, Gerald Gray, Harold L. McKeon, William L. Martin, Edward Mealey, John Nestor, George S. Pollard, Francis Plunkett, Walter M. Quinn, P. Frank Reilly, Bernard H. Roarke, John W. Sharkey, J. Frank Sullivan, Thomas J. FELL FROM PIAZZA

George Coronios, a contractor, residing at 548 Suffolk street, fell from a piazza on the second story of a house which he was erecting on Bedford ave. at about 12.30 this afternoon. The ambulance was called and he was removed to the Lowell General hospital where it is believed he is suffering from internal injuries.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT

Justice James H. Sisk of Lynn presided at today's session of the superior court for civil cases, which was held at the Gorham street courthouse. The greater part of the forenoon was taken up with the calling of the list of cases on the court calendar and hearing motions.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a triple action of tort amounting to $2300 went to trial. In these cases the defendants are Mario A., Joseph and Frank P. Pisciello all of Methuen, while the plaintiffs are Bennie Oberstein, Lena Kaplan and Lena Bloomfield by her next friend, Fannie Bloomfield, all of this city.

The suits are brought to recover for damages to an automobile truck owned by Oberstein and also to recover for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by Lena Kaplan and Lena Bloomfield in an automobile accident which occurred on the Lawrence-Haverhill highway in Methuen on Mar. 6, 1922, when it is claimed an automobile owned by the defendants crashed into a truck owned by Oberstein and in which the latter and the two other plaintiffs were riding. The ad damna are as follows: Oberstein, $300; Kaplan $1,000, and Bloomfield $1,000. Gun, Howard & Rogers for the plaintiffs, and Walter F. Rochefort for the defendant.

WATER VERY LOW AT THE PAWTUCKET DAM

Even with the Merrimack waters along the upper course kicked up by a stiff gale that swept down the Pawtucket valley this morning, the water was actually lower than ever before at this season of the year on the cap of the dam.

Little ice is now coming down the stream, vast quantities having disappeared "in transit" on the way down from the north country.

The workmen employed in replacing the damaged and lost flashboards on the Pawtucket dam have completed several hundred feet more "lengths," putting the new boards in place on the top of the dam after bending up scores of iron supports that had been doubled up forward by the masses of ice and debris that came down the river earlier in th spring.

The dam top runway is now about half covered with new flashboards. The dangerous work was performed in highly efficient fashion and with real speed by the Locks and Canals workmen without any delays worth reporting.

Rains are predicted in the weather offing, the forecast being for cloudy weather tonight and a storm on the way that ought to reach Lowell tomorrow if it remains on its present course. The winds are to be shifting in the south and southwest. If long, heavy rains come with the highland grounds in their present condition, there may yet be "high water" recorded for the month of April at the Pawtucket dam.

executions makes uncertain the circumstances under which the sentence was carried out, but it seems probable that Monsignor Butchkavitch was put to death in the Moscow prison for the condemned to which he had been removed after the reprieve was refused him.

Appeals from the outside world which had poured in upon the soviet authorities had no effect in staying the hand of the executioners. Competent opinion, indeed, is that even the breaking of diplomatic relations by outside governments or a threat of war, would not have moved the Moscow officials from their course. Their last word in the case had been spoken, it appears, when the commuted to 10 years' imprisonment the death sentence upon Archbishop Zepliak, convicted at the same time as Vicar General Butchkavitch.

Great Britain made representations through its official agent at Moscow; the affair was the subject of warm debate in parliament, and the archbishop of Canterbury took the lead in voicing the attitude of the English clergy.

The protest of the American state department was based on humanitarian grounds and set forth "the earnest hope" that the life of the vicar general might be spared.

The prelate who has been put to death was father superior of the Church of St. Catherine in Petrograd. He held the title of prelate to His Holiness, granted by the pope for special services. He was 55 years old. He came from an old and wealthy family of Polish origin although he himself was a Russian citizen.

Monsignor Butchavitch was a conspicuous figure in the trial of the Catholic prelates and priests, at which he appeared bald headed, rosy faced and bespectacled, and he bore himself with marked serenity throughout the ordeal, which resulted in death sentences for himself and Archbishop Zepliak and prison terms for their 15 fellow priests.

14 solicitation of funds for needy strikers and their families.

It was first planned to hold the "Tag Day" this week Saturday, but the event had to be postponed because another w thy organization has secured April 7 for fund collection campaign purposes. Young ladies anxious to aid the coming campaign and dispose of tags on the streets during the day's quest for relief funds, have been requested to send their names to the secretary of the B. & M. Federated crafts, Room 19, Odd Fellows building, 84 Middlesex street.

The following locals of the shop crafts will hold meetings this week:

Machinists' helpers No. 972, Thursday evening, April 5, at 7.30; Sheet Metal Workers No. 433, Thursday evening, 7.30; Blacksmiths' local No. 67, (Trades & Labor hall), Thursday evening, 7.30; Carmen's local No. 135, Friday evening, 7.30. THE OLD HOME TOWN

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., April 3.—The mysterious vessel, a former submarine chaser which put in here on a secret mission yesterday, after hovering about the rum-runners' haunts off this island for a week went out again today, heading southeast by south in the direction to which it was reported the British steamer Avontown, reputed to have a half-million dollar cargo of whiskey aboard, had moved overnight. The Agontown's position was given as approximately 12 miles off shore.

The converted sub-chaser, unnamed except for the name "Magdalene" inconspicuously stencilled on lifebuoys, and said by her captain to hail from New London, Conn., was to have gone out last night after conference with three strangers who met her officers here. But by wireless or otherwise word came to delay departure until this morning. Then with the three strangers aboard, she went out. The crew, obviously unused to their duties, allowed her to ground on the end of the breakwater and they were 10 minutes getting her off. Before leaving they told islanders that they were going out to pick up a cargo.

Speculation as to the errand of the vessel, and the identity of her three passengers, ran from a report that federal agents had engaged her to help them attempt to arrest James W. Costello of Boston, sought as a fugitive from justice at Boston where he is wanted in connection with rum-running operations on a large scale—to the more generally accepted version that she was one of several vessels in cahoots with the Avontown in distributing the big cargo of whiskey, which federal agents say the latter brought here from Glasgow, under the auspices of a Montreal-Boston rum ring and a Scotch distillery.

LECTURE AT THE NORMAL SCHOOL

Prof. A. H. Wilde, dean of the School of Education of Boston university, addressed the students of the State Normal school today on the subject of "Educational Opportunities for Prospective Teachers," Prof. Wilde is a good speaker and his subject was of great interest to the students of the school who are soon to enter the field of teaching. He outlined the many opportunities open for these prospective teachers and told them in a concise way how to make the most of their opportunities.

Today's lecture by Prof. Wilde took the place of the one announced on the spring list of lectures for tomorrow afternoon. Miss Louise French, of the Massachusetts department of Education, who was scheduled for tomorrow afternoon's lecture, has been called to Washington so it was necessary to get someone to take her place. Mr. Weed, principal of the school, was very fortunate in being able to get Prof. Wilde to do this.

NEW REIGN OF TERROR

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 3.—(By the Associated Press) A new reign of terror exists in western Thrace, where it is claimed the Greek army is driving out the Bulgarian population, according to statements issued by the government, which has just sent a note of protest to the allies.

The note claims protection for the minority population of the district under the peace treaty.

It is asserted that thousands of Bulgars are being driven from their homes under the pretext that they are aiding irregular bands.

The Greek government, replying to the Bulgarian accusations, stated that the Bulgarians in question were being deported to Crete for military reasons.

LOST PUP HAS MANY ADMIRERS

Found—a baby dog on a Moody street car this morning at about 6.30 o'clock. Operator Richard Arnold found the baby crawling about the floor when he arrived in the square and turned it in to the lost and found clerk in the street railway office in the square. Up to the time of going to press the baby was still there, being tenderly cared for by the clerk.

The pup is about eight weeks old and is a black and tan. Evidently he crawled out of some man's pocket on the car and the man went off without paying any attention to him. The pup has been well cared for and is so fat that it can hardly walk and it is quite an attraction to the operators and others who have occasion to go into the railway company's office.

If, by any chance, the owner of this dog does not want him, he may rest assured that it will be well cared for. Practically everybody who has seen the pup has put in a bid for him in case he is not called for, but so far it seems that it would remain in the hands of the lost and found clerk.

HATS OFF TO OLD MIDDLESEX COUNTY

Middlesex growers are told today in the latest number of the county agriculture and home economics "Bulletin," just out, that for the last 50 years this section of Massachusetts has stood near the head of the list with the counties of the United States for gross value of vegetables produced.

Today old Middlesex stands among the first five counties of the U.S.A., notwithstanding the tremendous increase in vegetable production during the last decade in other states.

Three California counties have come to the front. Cook county in Illinois is also in the first five.

Local members of the Middlesex North Agricultural society consider it some record for a comparatively small county in Massachusetts to rank so high in the entire nation.

ELECTION DAY IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, April 3.—Chicago voters today are balloting for a mayor, 20 aldermen and a representative in congress from the second Illinois district to fill the unexpired term of the late James R. Mann.

The race for mayor was enlivened by injection of the religious issue, some democrats charging that the K. K. K. had formed a phalanx to support the republican nominee, Arthur C. Lueder, former postmaster, and certain republicans in turn decrying the membership in the Roman Catholic church by Judge William E. Dever, the democratic standard bearer.

The candidates, themselves, including William A. Gunnae, socialist, continued to abstain from accusations and retorts discourteous, and last night for the first time spoke from the same platform, the pulpit of a church.

In the congressional contest the major party candidates are Morton D. Hull, former state senator, republican, and Barratt O'Hara, former lieutenant governor, democrat.

THE HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETIC FIELD

Spalding park, the athletic field of the Lowell high school, is to be cleaned up and showers and lavatories put in for the use of baseball and football players this spring. For a long time now the Alumni association has been collecting funds for the purchase and rebuilding of this park, but up to the present time it has only been able to collect enough to buy the park and to start work on absolutely necessary repairs.

About $13,000 has been collected altogether for the park; $4500 of this went to the purchase of the property, and the remaining money will be spent on repairs as aforementioned. Recently, a carpenter made a survey of the stands at the park and reported to Mr. Harris, president of the association, that the grandstand and left field bleachers were in fairly good condition and could be repaired for a moderate sum. No action has been taken on this matter, but it will be threshed out at the meeting of the Alumni association one week from tomorrow. Other matters that will come before this meeting will be the election of officers for the coming year and the question of what disposal to make of the portrait of Cyrus W. Irish, now being painted by Mrs. Mary Earl Wood.

Spalding park was for years the headquarters of the Lowell team of the New England baseball league and has been used by the high school for their baseball and football games. A short while ago it was thought that the park would be sold and split up into house lots. To avert this the Alumni association of the high school got together and collected money enough to purchase the property so that it would be saved for the use of high school athletes. After purchasing the property the association started a drive to collect funds to rebuild this into a stadium somewhat after the style of the Haverhill stadium. Up to the present there has not been money enough collected to make this possible, so the best that can be done is to repair the stands as they now are, and to fix up the grounds so that they will be in good condition for either baseball or football.

Notice of the meeting of the Alumni association will be present at the meeting unn of this paper and it is the hope of the president, Mr. Harris, that everyone who is interested in the association will be present at the meeting next Wednesday evening, April 11.

LOVE QUESTIONNAIRE

College Women Asked to Answer Questions by Bureau of Social Hygiene, Inc.

NEW YORK, April 3.—College women throughout the country have been asked by the bureau of social hygiene, Inc., founded by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to answer unusually frank questionnaires concerning love, it was learned today.

Questions put to unmarried women include:

"How old were you when you first began to spoon?

"What effect, as you estimate it now, did spooning have upon the quality of your character?

"Will you give the reason why you have not married?

"What things are most stimulating to you?"

Married women and widows were asked these questions:

"Has your married life been a happy one? If not, why not?"

"Were you strongly attracted toward young men?"

"If so, how would you describe this attraction?

"Did you indulge, with one or more young men in the intimacies usually embraced in the term spooning?"

"If so, how far did you go in spooning?"

The purpose of the questionnaires is to aid in solving vexed questions of education and hygiene.

"We must have more information about the average woman in order to have any reliable guidance in the training of our girls and boys," the introductory statement reads.

AUDITORIUM CUSTODIAN

Collin H. Mackenzie last night was elected permanent custodian and building manager of the Memorial Auditorium. At a meeting of the trustees he received the affirmative votes of Charles H. Hobson, Thomas P. Boulger and Fred A. Estes, while Mayor John J. Donovan, the fourth trustee, favored Harry F. O'Sullivan, who led the eligible list of three presented by the civil service commissioner.

The election brought a long drawn out controversy to a close and settled a question that has been hanging fire for several weeks. Mayor Donovan, while voting for Mr. O'Sullivan, wished it understood he had nothing personally against Mr. Mackenzie and was casting his vote for the former only because he stood at the head of the list.

The trustees expressed regret at a division of opinion and each said he held Mr. Mackenzie's experience on the job entitled him to first consideration. With these counter expressions of good feeling the incident was closed.
